Thousands Of Ships Are Used For Invasion

Eleven Thousand Planes
Support D-Day Landings
Made In France

SUCCESS SEEN IN INITIAL STAGES

By KINGSBURY SMITH
(International News Service)
LONDON, June 6.—Supported by 11,000 planes, thousands of ships and hundreds of massive guns, American, British and Allied troops landed in France by barge, glider and parachute today in an effort to seize the whole coast between Le Havre and Cherbourg and all indications pointed to success in the initial stages.

Some time after Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower gave the signal for invasion to launch the long-awaited battle of Europe, Prime Minister Winston Churchill went before the House of Commons to report that airborne aspects of the stupendous operations had been "successfully effected" while landings from the sea were still in progress.

Reports from operational commanders said the invasion was proceeding according to plan and as Churchill put it—"What a plan!" The German air force apparently offered little opposition and many of the enemy's shore batteries were knocked out of action, while the German sea forces had proved far less formidable than anticipated.

Gen. Eisenhower's supreme headquarters awaited a detailed picture (Continued On Page Two)

Pennsylvanians were called upon today by Gov. Edward Martin to observe Flag Day on June 14, the 167th anniversary of the adoption of the Stars and Stripes, by reaffirming their loyalty and devotion to the flag and country.

Attracting some attention this morning, about 8 o'clock, was a large truck running along East Washington street with about 25 shots aboard. Some nice pork in the offing.

Many flags were put out at homes in New Castle early this morning as news was received that D-Day had arrived and the invasion of Europe was under way. This was in accordance with suggestions made some time ago.

This morning, a corps of Pennsylvania Railroad employees commenced work at the crossing on East Washington street. The work of fixing this crossing is being done at the request of the state, in preparation for the project of annexing East Washington street to Butler avenue to which point the road has been completed from the eastern end, it is reported.

Points He Says

VAST OPERATION MOST DIFFICULT

BULLETIN
(International News Service)
LONDON, June 6.—Mass allied airborne landings have been successfully effected behind the enemy lines in France, Prime Minister Winston Churchill announced in the House of Commons today.

"Landings on the beaches are proceeding at various points," he said. "An armada of upward of 4,000 ships with several thousand smaller craft have crossed the channel," Churchill said.

"Massed airborne landings have been successfully effected behind the enemy's lines. "Enemy obstacles which were constructed at sea have not proved so difficult as was apprehended. "The Anglo-American allies are sustained by about 11,000 first-line aircraft which can be drawn upon as may be needed for the purposes of battle.

Surprise Attained
"There already are hopes that actual tactical surprise has been attained and we hope to furnish the enemy with a succession of surprises during the course of the fighting. "I cannot commit myself to any particular detail since reports are (Continued On Page Two)

NAPLES, June 6.—Allied armies in Italy, driving relentlessly forward above the Tiber river in pursuit of fleeing German forces, advanced five miles beyond Rome today.

A communique from headquarters of Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson said that only weak resistance was being met by fifth army troops fanning out beyond the Tiber to maintain pressure on the mauled forces of Nazi Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring.

British Reach Tiber
Along the Tyrrhenian sea coastal sector, British troops of the fifth army which drove straight northward from the former Anzio-Nettuno beachhead reached the Tiber at several points.

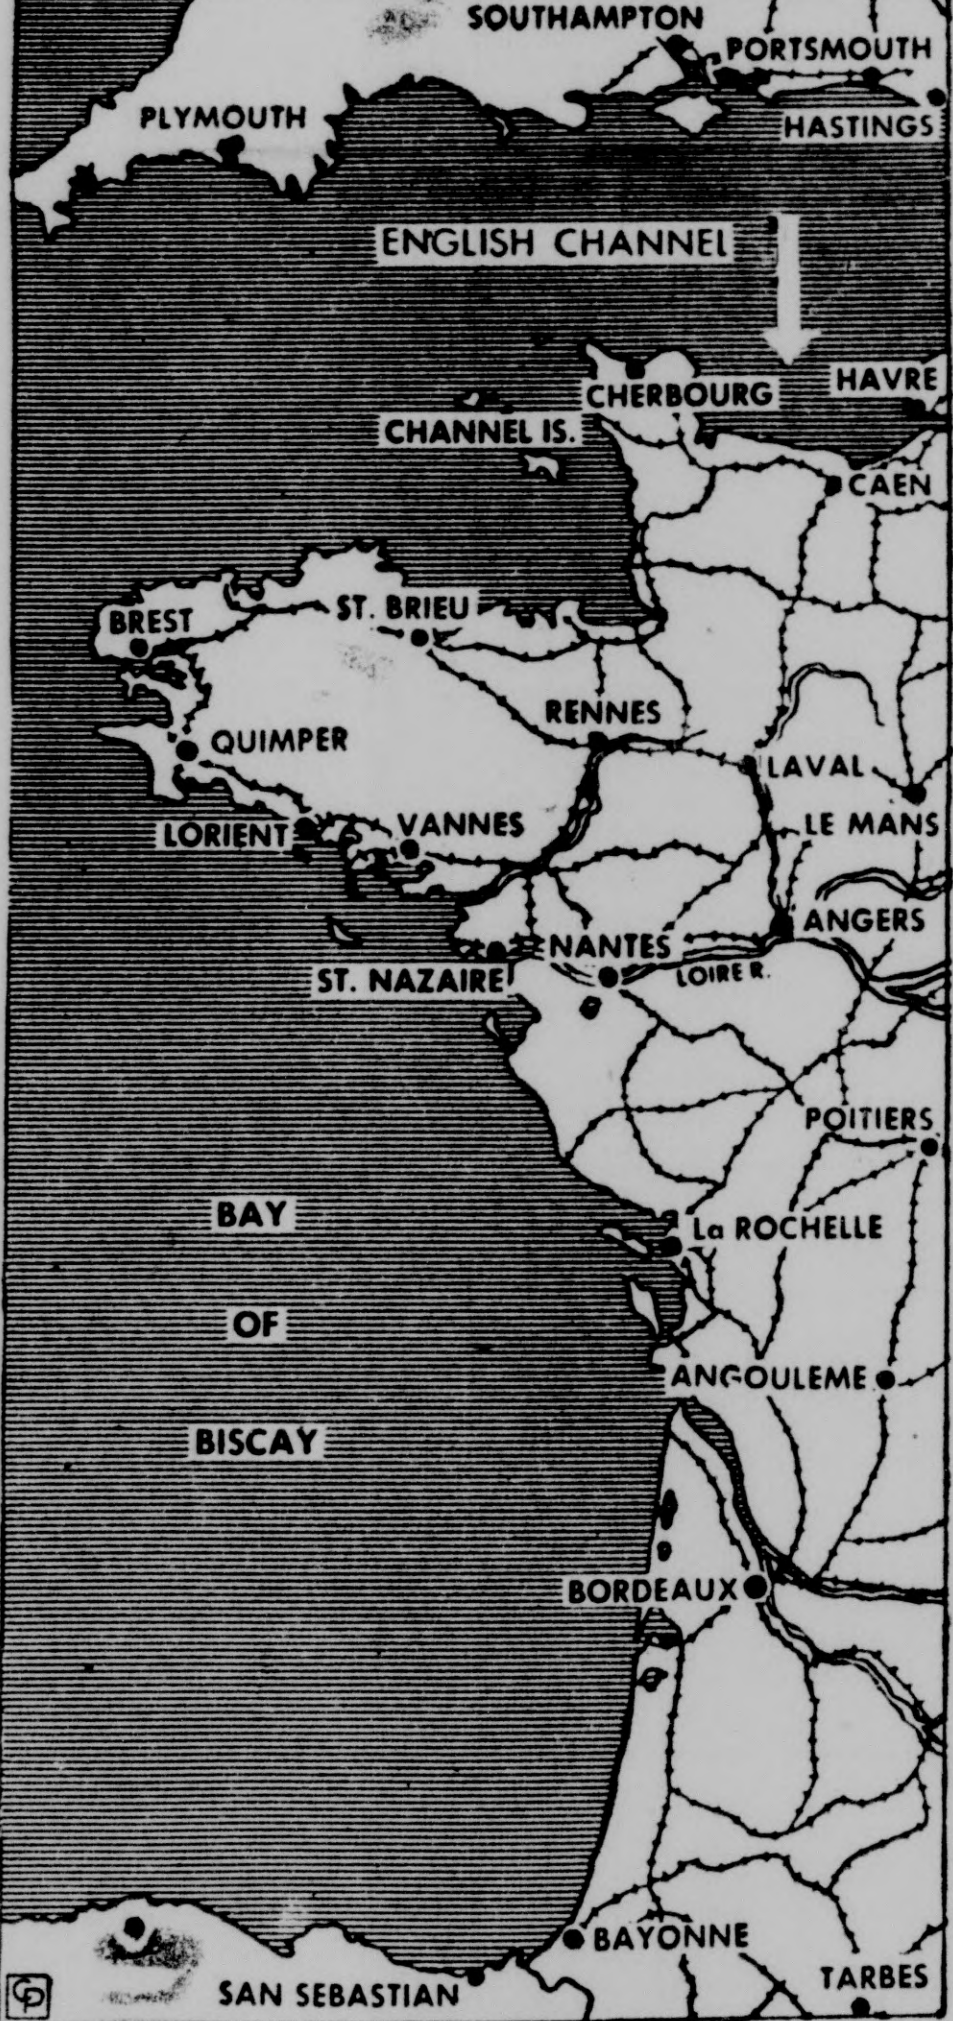

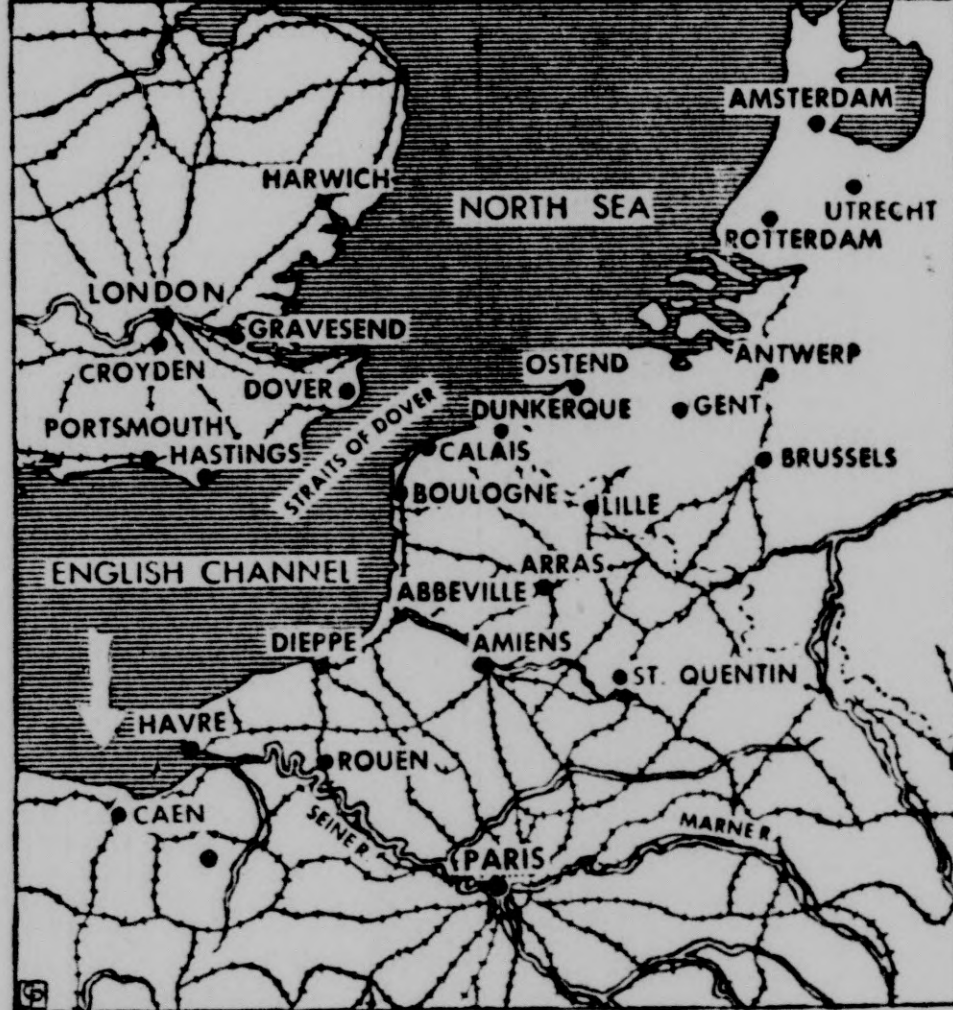

The British, mopping up the sector below the Tiber southwest of Rome already have rounded up 2,000 prisoners and the figure continues to grow, headquarters said.

Will Read Prayer For Safe-

KNEW D-DAY DATE MANY MONTHS AGO

By ROBERT G. NIXON
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, June 6.—President Roosevelt sat alone in his study writing a prayer for the safety of the tens of thousands of America's fighting youth after he received the flash this morning that the invasion of France had begun.

This was disclosed today when the White House announced that the Chief Executive will go on the radio at 10 p. m. E. W. T. tonight to read his prayer and lead the entire nation in a prayer for the success of the Allied liberations of Europe from the forces of Axis aggression.

Deeply moved by the cross channel onslaught against German occupied France, President Roosevelt remained awake the better part of the night and morning receiving reports, instantaneously relayed from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's Allied headquarters in England. The President slept briefly later in the morning.

President Roosevelt was informed before midnight that the movement of the vast Allied armada across (Continued On Page Two)

Warns That Final Victory Over Enemies Is Still
Some Distance Ahead

By ROBERT G. NIXON
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, June 6.—The American people had the solemn warning from President Roosevelt today that the day of final victory over Germany and Japan "still lies some distance ahead."

Mr. Roosevelt's warning was made in a special radio talk to the nation in which he hailed Allied deliverance of Rome and Vatican City from the Nazis. He greeted the capture of the first of the Axis capitals to fall to American and Allied arms with the jubilant phrase: "One up and two to go!"

"Tough and Costly"
Then Mr. Roosevelt cautioned the American people against a false evaluation of the importance of the victory. The road that lies ahead before the Axis can be brought to its knees, he declared, "will be tough and it will be costly."

"The Germans have retreated thousands of miles, all the way from the gates of Cairo, through Libya and Tunisia and Sicily and southern Italy. They have suffered heavy losses, but not great enough yet to cause collapse."

Therefore, the victory still lies some distance ahead. That distance will be covered in due time—have no fear of that. But it will be tough and it will be costly."

Commenting on the progress of the climactic struggle, Britain's Premier Winston Churchill said that the first stages of the stupendous operation had been "successfully effected." According to the British chief of state, German obstacles defying the sea approaches to the continent's beaches had been found much less formidable than Allied military leaders had been led to expect.

British And American Troops Launch "D-Day" Invasion On French Coast

(BULLETIN)
LONDON, June 6.—Penetrations "several miles inland" were made today by American, British and Canadian troops which poured into northern France by air and sea in overwhelming strength and established firm fighting fronts in the first stage of the battle for Europe.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill, in his second appearance of the day before the House of Commons, gave this stirring report of the invasion.

Supreme headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's Allied expeditionary forces added to Churchill's summary by disclosing that the first in a series of "four or five obstacles" in the way of Europe's liberation has now been overcome.

By International News Service
American and British troops, in the first of a series of triphibious operations from Britain, landed on the northern coast of France and deep behind the enemy's lines today in what was described officially as a "successful" invasion thrust.

The amphibious forces under an aerial canopy stormed ashore from a vast armada, so numerous that one Allied flier who watched the invasion from the air said "it looked like you could walk across."

However, Prime Minister Winston Churchill told the House of Commons a few hours after the operation began that there were more than 4,000 ships accompanied by several thousand other smaller craft.

The operation, which put tremendous invasion forces ashore at points between the Seine and the Cherbourg peninsula, was co-ordinated with the landing by airborne troops in "great depth" behind the German lines.

Scant details of the actual fighting were available. However, Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery, veteran commander of the British Eighth Army of North Africa and Italian fame, was known to be in command of all the land forces going ashore.

Montgomery, usually reticent until he is perfectly certain of his remarks, declared that he had "absolute and complete confidence in the outcome" of the operation.

The German propaganda agents made varying claims of tremendous damages inflicted on the invaders, but there was absolutely no official Allied confirmation to these enemy assertions. As a matter of fact, Churchill said that the fire of four batteries has been "largely quelled" and declared that "enemy obstacles which were constructed at sea have not proved so difficult."

However, shortly after noon German long-range batteries in northern France lobbed several shells across the channel into southeastern English coastal regions for 45 minutes. Bomber squadrons went out at the height of the bombardment and shortly thereafter the German guns were silent.

ENEMY PLANES NOT ENCOUNTERED

By THURSTON MACAULEY
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)
A LIBERATOR BOMBER STATION SOMEWHERE IN BRITAIN, June 6.—Airmen returning to this heavy bomber base from their first "D-Day" mission today said their only regret was that the weather kept them from doing more to help the boys down below.

The majority of returning airmen reported that the Normandy invasion coast of France was overcast. In some cases the weather was so thick they were unable to drop their bombs for fear of hitting the almost endless Allied naval armada off the shore at the zero hour.

Those who dropped bombs did so through clouds.

Second Lieut. Grant Patton, aboard the first Liberator to return to base said:

Channel Overcast
"The channel was overcast, but through gaps I saw a vast fleet of ships."

"We encountered no enemy planes and flak gave no trouble."

"I would rather go over Berlin than have to force my way through such formations of our fighters," he added in commenting on the multitudes of supporting smaller aircraft in the skies.

Capt. Peter J. Haggard, of Bay-side, N. Y., a squadron bombardier aboard one of the Liberators which did not drop its missiles, said:

"It was just a long ride without incidents. There was no enemy and almost no flak. But over the channel (Continued On Page Ten)

Report Soviets Ready To Move

MOSCOW, June 6.—(INS)—A new hint that Soviet forces are getting ready to move toward Germany was given today by Ilya Ehrenburg, Soviet writer, in the newspaper Pravda.

"There's an old saying that all roads lead to Rome," he wrote. "Today we'll say—all roads lead to Berlin."

The Germans don't know by which route the Allied armies will start moving. There are many routes, but they all lead to Berlin."

The rumble of planes over Normandy, the rattle of guns on the coast, the channel churning with ships of war, and over it all the ghost of a little man who has big ideas but failed as dictators will and Hitler boasts are beginning to fold as the allies move in for the kill. But it only Adolf had stopped to read of the failure of Bonaparte, it might have been there would be now be peace, and the carnage would never start. The rumble of the rattle of guns, and a short of derision from Fate, for she knows full well what the score will be, the weather is eighty-eight.

Five More Jap Ships Are Sunk

Two Destroyers Believed Included In Fall Of Ships Taken

By GEORGE LAIT (U.S. Staff Correspondent)

GEN. DOUGLAS MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, New Guinea, June 6—American planes added five Japanese ships today to their list of enemy craft sunk or damaged, sinking at least one and probably two Jap destroyers and three other lesser vessels in sweeps over waters bordering Dutch New Guinea.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Headquarters, announcing the toll taken last night by the Liberator and Navy Catalina bombers off Halmahera and Monokwari, added that the presence of Jap warships in New Guinea waters was not unusual. Other Allied warplanes were active in widespread raids throughout New Guinea, the Bismarck archipelago and upon Truk in the Carolines, and destroying 19 and probably 20 enemy planes.

Highlight of these operations was the smashing blow dealt the much-vaunted Jap base at Truk, in which the American lost but a single plane. On the credit side of the ledger, the Yanks poured 79 tons of high explosive damages upon ground installations and shot down seven of 20 Jap interceptors which contested their approach.

Direct word was then flashed to the President in his study of the moment that the first landing barges "climbed" ashore on the beaches of the French peninsula between Le Havre and Cherbourg.

Known Date Months Ago Mr. Roosevelt knew, the White House revealed today, months ago the day and hour of the long-awaited Anglo-American assault on Fortress Europe.

After the President made his radio address to the nation last night, hailing the fall of Rome to the Allies, Mr. Roosevelt retired to his study and, behind blacked-out windows, awaited for the first word from General Eisenhower that the invasion was on.

The entire White House was blacked out with dark curtains to conceal the fact that President Roosevelt was awake and watching for the invasion news.

The President wrote his prayer for the success of the invasion with pen and paper on White House stationery as he sat awaiting news on the progress of the invasion.

of more than 4000 large vessels, plus several thousand smaller craft. First wave to approach the shore, in accordance with the rules of amphibious warfare, were destroyers, sub-chasers and mine-sweepers charged with the task of clearing channels through obstacles.

Then the battleships and cruisers approached to pour their fire on shore batteries and defensive positions. Under the hail of shells, infantry landing craft raced for the beaches, opening yawning doors and dropping bridges over which men, field guns and tanks dashed ashore against enemy objectives.

Meantime, for hours, Allied transport planes had been speeding from British air fields bearing cargoes of parachute troops followed by swarms of tow-planes with strings of gliders for attacks against strategic positions far inland.

This is the pattern of modern assault on an embattled continent. Attacks come by sea, land and air. When the enemy fortifies the ground and the beaches, attacking forces go straight up in the air to an altitude of three miles or more to turn his flank.

Although early reports are favorable, probably several days must elapse before definite results can be known with certainty as to the initial attack on the beachheads. Probably several of the beachheads are being launched besides the stroke now in progress. Then will come a period of waiting while the Nazis gather their mobile forces for counter-attacks that will decide the fate of the invasion—and Europe.

coming in in rapid succession, but so far commanders repeat everything is proceeding according to plan.

This is the first of a series of landings in force on the European continent. Landings on the beaches are proceeding at various points.

"So far the commanders engaged according to plan—what a plan!—the most complicated and difficult that has ever occurred."

"We shall furnish the enemy with a succession of surprises during the course of the fighting. The battle will grow constantly in scale and intensity for many weeks to come."

Complete Unity "I shall not attempt to speculate upon its course but this I may say—that complete unity prevails throughout the allied armies."

"There is a brotherhood in arms between us and our friends of the United States."

"The ardor and spirit of our troops, as I saw for myself as they were embarking in the last few days, was splendid to witness. The prime minister indicated he was most anxious further news later in the day."

With regard to Rome, the prime minister said:

"This entry of a liberation army into Rome means we shall have power to defend it from hostile air attacks and deliver it from the famine with which it was threatened."

The prime minister pointed out that complete unity prevails throughout the allied armies.

"There is complete confidence in Gen. Eisenhower and his lieutenants and in Gen. Montgomery."

"The ardor and spirit of the troops, as I saw them myself embarking in the last few days, was splendid."

"Nothing that equipment, science and forethought can do has been neglected, and the whole process of opening this great new front will be pursued with the utmost resolution both by the commanders and the Anglo-American governments."

Referring to Italy, Churchill disclosed that the allied losses on the Anzio beachhead totalled 20,000 men while those of the enemy totalled 25,000.

Predicts French Will Open Route To Paris Soon

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(INS)—Henri Hoppenot, representative of the French national committee in Washington, predicted today that French soldiers fighting beside the allies "tomorrow will open the road to Paris."

THOUSANDS OF SHIPS ARE USED FOR INVASION

of the situation before making any new announcement. But at intervals of only a few minutes during the day, German broadcasting stations and the official propaganda agency DNB reported continued new Allied landings at numerous points under an overwhelming aerial cover and naval barrage.

German Efforts to Confuse The German broadcasts made it appear that the Allies, in addition to landing far behind the German coast defenses to establish airfields and sever enemy communications, were swarming ashore at points all along the so-called Seine Bight from Le Havre to Cherbourg with the possible object of nipping off the Cherbourg Peninsula.

Nazi broadcasts said the immediate Allied objective was to capture the great seaport of Cherbourg itself.

With regard to the German assertions that Allied forces landed at innumerable large and small towns on the French side of the English Channel, a spokesman at Headquarters pointed out that Nazi claims are expected continuously to name landing points—real or imagined—with the hope of drawing out an Allied statement.

Allied headquarters, he said, will issue no confirmation or rebuttal of such claims and correspondents will have to await issuance of communications and information to be made available at "background sessions."

Nearly 4000 Ships

Upwards of 4,000 ships accompanied by several thousand smaller craft have crossed the English Channel, Churchill told the House of Commons, with airborne landings successfully carried out and other invasion units putting ashore in various areas.

This operation, he said, is the "first of a series of landings" on the continental Europe.

"The fire of shore batteries has been largely quelled," Churchill said. Obstacles which the Germans constructed at sea "have not proved so difficult as was apprehended," the prime minister continued.

"The Anglo-American Allies are sustained by about 11,000 fuel-line aircraft," Churchill added. "These can be drawn up as may be needed for the purposes of battle."

"Nothing But Victory"

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower launched the long-awaited attack with an order of the day in which he proclaimed:

"We will accept nothing less than full victory."

American, British and Canadian warships in stupendous array and ranging from battleships down to landing craft escorts supported the cross-channel landings while the Allied air force operating in enormous strength shielded the paratroopers.

German broadcasts reported heavy fighting in the vicinity of Caen, 7½ miles inland and said that paratroop landings had been made at numerous points between Cherbourg and Le Havre.

At 10:19 a. m., 4:19 a. m. E.W.T., a headquarters spokesman said:

"This is the naval phase of the operations. It is still too early to say what extent surprise was achieved."

Near Cherbourg

Supplementary information at supreme command headquarters said that the landing area comprised points between the Seine and Cherbourg, while the Germans characterized the penetrations as in "great depth."

Little was known of paratroopers dropped at certain points according to a long-prepared schedule. But carrying aircraft suffered "very little casualties."

For the past 24 hours, Allied mine-sweepers had been clearing the English channel of mines while Allied aircraft pounded the coastal regions of France incessantly.

Channel weather was rough and much seasickness was anticipated among the invading troops. The invasion area probably was strongly defended and considerable opposition was anticipated. Hopes were expressed that the French underground in France, by means of sabotage to railways and other aids, would hinder the Germans in rushing to their mobile reserves.

To aid the hazardous undertaking, Allied craft relentlessly pounded known German troop concentrations as well as shore batteries and other installations.

Washington Roundup

(International News Service)

Washington, like the rest of the world, today has its attention centered on Europe, invaded early this morning by the Allies.

Reaction in the capital is highlighted by Gen. John J. Pershing, who led the United States Army to victory over Germany in the first World War. In a statement issued by the war department, Pershing says "We will win through to victory."

There probably will be a statement from President Roosevelt later in the day. The invasion came a few hours after his radio speech in which he rejoiced over the liberation of Rome and asserted the Allied armies now have "one up and two to go" in capturing enemy capitals.

It is disclosed that Leo T. Crowley, foreign economic administrator, will soon leave for Italy to make a personal inspection of the relief problems brought about by occupation of Rome.

Capitol Hill reaction to the invasion is one of prayer for the success of the American soldiers. The War Department, in stark realism is preparing for the boys who won't come through. The department is asking Congress to create 69 new National cemeteries to receive the bodies of a "hypothetical" 100,000 fighting men expected to be killed overseas. The department plans to return all overseas dead after the war if 70 percent or more of the next of kin so request.

Meanwhile, Sen. Ferguson (R) Mich., announces he will demand a Congressional investigation into the Pearl Harbor tragedy, the House is scheduled to vote on a resolution extending the time for trial of the Pearl Harbor commanders and a special house committee will hear Montgomery Ward Chairman Sewell testify in its probe of seizure of the mail order firm.

cause bridges downstream from Rome had been destroyed and they could not cross the water barrier. The allied fifth and eighth army troops, constantly supported by aerial assaults which harassed the retreating Germans, moved forward "without pause" in the "battle to destroy the enemy."

The chief objects of destruction were the severely shattered German 10th and 14th armies.

Vatican City By-Passed

Headquarters said that Vatican City had been completely by-passed by the allied forces moving through Rome. 11 of 14 bridges in the Italian capital were found intact, although several demolitions had been prepared by the Germans.

Action on other sectors included occupation of Tivoli east and slightly north of Rome by French troops against some Nazi resistance.

Eight army forces which marched up northward along the Via Cassina continued to join up with the fifth army in the Rome sector.

In the mountainous sectors the eighth army still battled against bitter resistance. German troops were occupied with being moved up in the direction of Soriano.

Planes of the tactical air force made concentrated attacks on the Nazi lines of communication leading to the battle area, smashing scores of transport vehicles and damaging others. Allied aircraft destroyed at least 200 and damaged 175 while other formations plastered other installations and heavy bomber forces swept up northward to blast rail yards at Ferrara, Castel Maggiore, Bologna, Fenza and Forli.

Count Basie's new album of "Blues" is what you have been waiting for—"St. Louis Blues"—"Royal Garden"—"Sugar" and five others—the clear, concise pianistic endeavors of Basie are heard to best advantage accompanied by a select group.

STUBBORN CASE OF CONSTIPATION GONE

"No more salts, oils, every day," writes ex-sufferer

Want to stop dosing—and yet keep regular? Then read this unsolicited letter from Mr. Lowe.

"I am 71 years old, today I'm in the best of health. But, for 15 years I had a stubborn case of constipation—had to rely on salts or castor oil every day. Got so weak I could hardly walk. Five months ago I read one of your ads and my wife advised me to try your ALL-BRAN. After first week my passage was normal. For 6 months I have been eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly and haven't taken a laxative. Thanks for ALL-BRAN's grand relief." Frank Lowe, 4503 S. W. 9th St., Des Moines, Iowa.

You'll be interested in knowing exactly how KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN helps so many people—how this wholesome cereal gets at a common cause of constipation—lack of certain dietary cellulose elements. You see ALL-BRAN is one of Nature's most effective sources of these elements—which help the friendly colonic flora to fluff up and prepare wastes for easy elimination. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is not a purgative, it is a "regulating" food.

If your constipation is this kind, eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly—and drink plenty of water. See if it doesn't help. Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

The regular use of Clorox is a vitally important health precaution in washing white and color-fast cottons and linens...in cleansing kitchen and bathroom "danger zones". ## Washington Calling

By MARQUIS CHILDS

Allied Heads Differ

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Two men could hardly be more unlike each other than President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill. To his associates FDR presents an outward air of detachment and calm. Churchill, all through the past weeks, has been intensely preoccupied with the big event to come, brooding over its outcome and its consequences.

Completely absorbed in preparations for the great offensive Churchill has brushed aside any talk about what is to happen after the war. He simply won't hear it.

That is the explanation given by those who have seen him recently for his "kind words" for France. They say that he was thinking of the prime minister's role in relation to the supreme test of Allied arms. He knows—so the explanation goes—as well as anyone else that Dictator Franco cannot long survive the end of the war.

For all his preoccupation with the events on which so much turns, Churchill's humanity comes out from time to time. Not long ago he told a story on himself which gave the war cabinet a good laugh. It was a story which had already gained wide currency but Churchill furnished details that were new.

Impressed With Reports

The prime minister had been impressed with the political reports from America sent by Isaiah Berlin, a member of the British staff in Washington. Hearing that Berlin was on a visit to London, the prime minister told a secretary to ask him around to lunch at No. 10 Downing Street. At the appointed time, the two men sat down to lunch alone and Churchill began to quiz the embassy secretary on political developments in the United States.

The responses were remarkably weak. The great man was first puzzled and then a little irritated. Finally he said, half in reproach: "You know, Mr. Berlin, I have studied your work very carefully."

Looking startled, Mr. Berlin replied, "Why, Mr. Prime Minister, I didn't know that you cared for light music." Through a mistake, Isaiah Berlin, who was also in London, had been invited to lunch instead of Isaiah Berlin. The prime minister could chuckle over that with the members of his cabinet.

His remark in American politics is a continuing one. He knows that any British interference, or even seeming interference will do great harm in this country. No British official will breathe a word about our politics.

Can't Keep Back Feelings

Nevertheless, with American visitors, Churchill finds it hard to keep back his own feelings. With one such visitor not long ago, he talked about "the team"—Roosevelt-Stalin-Churchill team—and the importance of keeping it together during the war and its immediate aftermath. His visitor, it happened, was a life-long Republican who remonstrated at a little of Churchill's insistence that it was important to "the team" to go on working together.

He has had some rather sharp disagreements with Roosevelt, some of them face to face, others by long distance. These have involved, on several occasions, Churchill's concept of colonies and "subject peoples." The American president and the British prime minister have found themselves diametrically opposed.

At Tehran, there was something like a showdown. Whether the differences have since been reconciled, only the principals know. Churchill may stand pat on the question of colonies and the empire.

That would then give the vote of the third member of the team—Stalin—decisive importance. At Tehran, Stalin was with Roosevelt and Churchill. Churchill has been at least one major row at the time Churchill visited Moscow in 1942.

But they are both supremely realistic and they both know what they want.

THE TERRIBLE TEMPERED MR. BANG

Man on the witness stand was, by coincidence, the lawyer's doctor. The lawyer's face was red and he was shouting the usual "Where were you on the night of..." questions. The doctor raised his hand and said to his patient:

"Now don't be a fool, McGregor. I've warned you about your high blood pressure. Take it easy."

After that the cross-examination proceeded in a much subdued manner.

The Wallace Controversy

WASHINGTON, June 6.—There was a day not so long ago when energetic Senator Styles Bridges (R-Me.) was that, in the event of the election of the Roosevelt-Wallace ticket, Mr. Wallace's chances of becoming president before the term is over are considerably greater than they were in 1940.

THIS IS too obvious to need argument. For one thing, should Mr. Roosevelt be reelected, he would be 63 years old soon after his inauguration, instead of 59 as in 1940. For another, while the matter with him, he has been forced to slow down, see fewer people and do less work. Under order of his physicians he is taking better care of himself. And the whole White House staff is trying to spare him all unnecessary labor. Naturally, this has given rise to speculation concerning the situation should he be reelected. It has been suggested, for example, that after the war against Germany has been won Mr. Roosevelt might resign, devoting himself to the making of the peace and accepting direction of the post-war League of Nations. Or he might find himself physically unable to cope with the terribly difficult post-war domestic problems and be compelled to relinquish the presidency to save his health. Either of these suggestions fits in with the claim of his friends that he really doesn't want to be president again and is running only because of his belief that his continuance is essential to the winning of the war.

OF COURSE, if elected, Mr. Roosevelt may regard his full strength and serve another term (the then would be only 67) with unimpaired vitality. But, it must be admitted that, for one reason or another, there is an enhanced prospect over 1940, that he would not complete his term. It is this enhancement that makes the Wallace nomination so controversial a question. For, there are two widely separated schools of thought about Mr. Wallace. His advocates are as ardent as his opponents are implacable. Among the radicals of the country, the advanced thinkers of the New Deal he is unquestionably a hero. Some of these prefer him to Mr. Roosevelt, think him a very great man, indeed. They have compared his speeches to the Gettysburg address, and insist that he is our leading "liberal"—a "great humanitarian" in the Lincoln type. In addition, he is the darling of the CIO, which indorses him along with the president and calls loudly for his renomination. Inasmuch as the CIO is the main reliance of the Roosevelt fourth term campaign, its devotion to Mr. Wallace is important.

THERE IS another school, however, with whom Mr. Wallace is intensely unpopular. By it he is regarded as an unbalanced and extreme radical, who would, if elected, carry the New Deal socialistic policies to the farthest limit, who is full of noble, though half-baked, notions for the uplifting of the "common man" but utterly lacking in practical ability and, besides, addicted to crystal gazing and other queer means of peering into the future. The idea of Mr. Wallace is important.

Bridges Splits With White House
Poland And Warship Deal Involved
Gahagan Picked To Win The Election

By HELEN ESSARY
(Central Press Columnist)

WASHINGTON, June 6.—There was a day not so long ago when energetic Senator Styles Bridges (R-Me.) was that, in the event of the election of the Roosevelt-Wallace ticket, Mr. Wallace's chances of becoming president before the term is over are considerably greater than they were in 1940.

He backed lend-lease and every other means of aiding the British. He raised his voice in warning of imminent war long before the Japanese sneak-attack on Pearl Harbor. But Bridges, who does not seem to mind, now is in the White House "dog house" because of his opposition to foreign policy.

He has championed the cause of Free Poland, and asked repeatedly on the Senate floor what the intention of the administration are toward the Poles and the other enslaved peoples who are to be freed. Recently, the senator wrote a letter to the president, suggesting that he arrange for a commission of Allied and Axis military representatives, to supervise the demilitarization of Rome under neutral auspices. The aim was to spare the Eternal City on the banks of the Tiber and have it declared an open city in the middle of all-out war.

The White House referred the letter to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who replied politely to Bridges, saying the suggestion was appreciated and everything was being done to save Rome.

The other day Bridges disclosed the United States has turned over a cruiser to Russia. That liked the White House to the point of implying the senator was using foreign privileges to disclose military secrets.

Sedition Trial Lengthy

The government's sometimes spectacular mass sedition trial of 29 defendants charged with conspiring to bring Italy here is scheduled to drag out all summer long.

Invasion will be under way in Europe, the nominating conventions will be in session in Chicago, the world will be whirling onward at a giddy, gory pace. But nothing will stop the trial before stern-faced Chief Justice Edward C. Tamm.

Bets are running fairly even on the defendants will be found guilty, and that the United States Supreme Court eventually will reverse the verdict and order a new trial. But those are only bets.

More feminine footsteps soon will resound as echoes to the lusty boots of men that tramp up and down the Capitol steps.

Two new candidates, one of them from Hollywood, appear likely to join the growing delegation of ladies in Congress.

These are Helen Gahagan, stage and screen actress and wife of Movie Actor Melvyn Douglas, and Mrs. Paul Douglas, now in-law whatever, who is the daughter of the famous sculptor, Lorado Taft.

Miss Gahagan has survived the California Democratic primaries in a normally New Deal district and looks in.

Mrs. Douglas, whose husband is Dr. Paul Douglas of the University of Chicago faculty, looks likely in her Illinois congressional district.

To Recognize Bolivia

The United States is expected soon to recognize a revolutionary government of Bolivia, which was set up last December.

Ambassador Avra Warren, who is making a survey of condition in Bolivia, has just reported to Washington. The survey is expected to lead to United States recognition.

A woman member of the legislative assembly of British Columbia watched action in America's House of Representatives on the "GI Bill of Rights" the other day and voiced amazement at the "informality" of members on the floor.

She was Mrs. Nancy Hodges, first woman ever elected from Victoria, Canada to the British Columbia assembly.

"We are much more formal in British Columbia," she observed. "But you are more colorful."

Disposing Of Surpluses

Federal officials are beginning to worry whether the country will be over-supplied with some materials when the war is over.

The problem of disposing of war surpluses is as important as the problem of making up for war scarcities. What officials decide may mean the difference between inflation and prosperity in the postwar period.

Stocks of consumer goods on store shelves have declined rapidly. But the armed forces will have huge amounts of everything, from underwear to canned food, which will have to be sold.

On the other hand, there will be a scarcity of civilian goods which have not been made during the war and cannot reach the market quickly. Such goods include washing machines, electrical refrigerators, automobiles, vacuum cleaners and the like.

In other words, the prospect is for an over-all glut of food and raw materials, and a scarcity of many products that the materials go into. Normally the consequence would be a sharp drop in the price of food crops, cotton, wool, metals and other raw materials, and a steep rise in the price of scarce automobiles and household equipment.

Tackling that problem, Price Administrator Bowles suggests that price control be continued into the postwar period until supply and demand come into balance at a fair price level.

The idea would be to build price floors under the plentiful products, and ceilings over the scarce ones. But this isn't a cure-all. In the past, price support has led to production control. It is easier to fight the pressure for low prices if production is kept down artificially.

But if production is cut there are fewer jobs, unless production of something else is increased proportionately. Idle or semi-idle plants would mean that America would be wasting some of the productive capacity which postwar planners hope will be used to the full.

As a matter of fact, the problem of disposing of surpluses will be much simpler if attention is concentrated on the ability of America to consume—that is, on the ability of the people to buy and use all the products industry is capable of turning out. Surpluses should not be measured in relation to prewar requirements, but with a view to an ever-increasing standard of living.

HINTS AND DINTS

Sun sets tonight 8:33. Sun rises tomorrow 5:23.

A woman will protest that she "can't stay" even while she is taking her hat off.

Send him flowers today. When he sees them he can't thank you. Today he can. Do it now.

"Cut that out" is a slang phrase borrowed evidently from a doctor.

Next time you feel blue look in the glass and make faces at yourself.

VISION AND SUCCESS

Vision plays a mighty important part in our life.

The man or woman in business who looks not only ahead but all around them will see opportunities that are entirely missed by men and women engrossed in the petty routine of immediate affairs.

Without vision, ideals are impossible. The spirit of service, the sincere intent to earn one's way in the world, the earnest endeavor to deliver just a little more than is expected, these are the products of vision.

So, widen your horizon by elevating your vision.

Get a broadened perspective by setting your mind off the treadmill of dull and monotonous routine.

Broaden your vision and you'll enjoy stronger and more vigorous health and you'll magnetize your self by making new acquaintances and more wholesome companions.

The fly swatter is a handy little gadget but it is no substitute for window screens.

The successful Victory gardener puts his best foot forward by placing it on the spade and pressing down.

Some friends are a habit—some a luxury.

Young man in Arkansas applied for a job as shoe salesman.

"Know anything about shoes?" he was asked.

"Sure I do," the youth bragged. "I've been wearing them every Sunday for five years."

Every man thinks his own estimate of himself is conservative.

Two dollars will buy a lot of excitement, football games, prize fights and a marriage license.

Ten minutes of good luck will make you forget all the bad luck you ever had.

Idle curiosity keeps too many people busy.

These days men find themselves in hot water a lot oftener than Saturday night.

"I had to leave school on account of pneumonia." "Yeah?" "Yeah. I didn't know how to spell it."

A little girl who thinks she has too many dolls is as hard to find as a man who thinks he has too many dollars.

Looking At Life

By ERICH BRANDEIS

Over a period of years I have developed a habit which comes in pretty handy when you write for a living.

When ideas come to me—on the train, in bed, at the lunch table—I scribble them down on the backs of envelopes.

Then, when I get enough of these envelopes into my pocket so that no more fit in, I look over them before I throw them away, and see whether there isn't something there to write about.

Here is one I just came across: "Never trust a man who doesn't trust others."

I wrote that one down after I met a fellow who has to get everything in writing.

Whatever he does, there must always be a signed agreement. If he lends you ten dollars, he wants an I. O. U. if he pays a bill, no matter how small, he must have a receipt. "Why do you do that?" I asked him.

"Because you can't trust people," was his reply.

"Can't you trust people?" I asked him.

He answered before he had a chance to think about his answer. "Because most people are cheats if they get a chance," he said.

There you have it. Only a person who is a cheat at heart suspects others of being cheats.

I happen to know that this particular fellow will squeeze the last nickel out of any deal.

I would never trust him, because he doesn't trust his fellow man.

Here is another note I scribbled on the envelope.

"To have friends you must be a friend."

I remember why I made that note. It's about a fellow who makes life of money, who has a beautiful home and many acquaintances, but not a single real friend.

The acquaintances are either people who want favor from him or who like his liquor and his food.

But if he lost his money, or his job tomorrow, he would be completely alone.

This fellow has no friends because he can't be a friend.

He entertains only people who are socially worth-while to him or whose company he can help him to climb.

To him friendship is capital that must bear interest.

What's the moral in these two notes I took?

Oh, nothing much except that I agree with Emerson that you get what you give, and come to think of it, there's something similar in the Bible.

Isn't there?

Kerosene Lanterns

A history of man could be written in terms of his ability to provide himself light. No chapter in that history would be more revealing than the story of the service of the humble kerosene lantern.

Down through long centuries man has used a lantern. It is not recorded when he first learned to submerge part of a wick in animal oil and obtain light from the other end. But when kerosene came along man quickly learned to imprison the wick in a globe so that the lantern could be carried.

To kerosene, or coal oil, as it is still called in certain areas, man owes much. Uncounted millions of railroad lanterns, with double wire protection around the heavy globe, have followed the railroads as they pushed over mountains and plains toward the land of the setting sun. Today, they guard lives and freight on the nation's 230,000 miles of railroads.

Kerosene lanterns have hung beneath farm wagons on the way to town Saturday night; they have served their turn on the sides of gay carriages and sleighs when city folk drove about the streets in early evenings. They have hung as signals on ships and today stand or hang in sentry rows when a street or road is under repair. They have served for light in man-made caverns deep in the earth. Not too long ago the lamplighter made his daily round along the street, lighting the lamps inside the wrought-iron lanterns that stood on oaken posts.

No one can tell what the sight of a lantern has meant in terms of human happiness. On many a lonely road, in many an isolated home, the sight of a gleaming lantern has given comforting heart flow. It is symbolic that once upon a time a lantern's light gleamed from a church steeple and a man sped off to awaken a new country to its destiny. Lanterns are good companions of man.

Giving light to dark places, bringing cheer to human hearts, they help man's feet keep the path that leads upward.

ARMY WIFE

"I will soon marry an Army corporal. He would like to have me go to the nearest town to his camp and live in a room so that we can be together whenever he is free. Mother thinks this is a horrible idea and she is trying to discourage my going. What is your opinion on this subject? Do you think I should go?"—Maribelle.

Answer: You alone can make this decision. I love the boy enough to marry him, you might accede to his wishes to live near the camp for a while at least.

Of course, there are many facets to the problem. First and foremost is the financial angle. Living expenses in towns adjacent to camps are somewhat high for a corporal with no other income than his army pay. But if you can afford to do so, you should. I think, give it a trial. Perhaps you can "take it" better than a number of girls who have been through the experience and consider it "difficult" beyond description. But of course, they had to prove that to themselves by giving it a trial. You will have to do likewise.

It may prove to be an unglamorous, lonely life, for you will probably see your husband only a few hours every evening and possibly on weekends during such hours as he is permitted to leave camp. So take into consideration that your days may be long and uneventful and that you may be bored and lonely and that in a small town you will find no work to keep you busy and make your life profitable.

If you think you can stand the hardship and the loneliness of the life, go and enjoy your husband's companionship during the little time he may have to offer you. Then when you find the life palling, you may come home. So do not promise him that the arrangement is to be permanent.

If you do not take advantage of this opportunity to be together, both of you might later feel that you have missed something. But don't become a camp-follower—going like a ewe from town to town. It's a sordid life for youngsters with insufficient money for travel and enjoyment of a modern, comfortable home.

A BOY NAMED WILLIAMS

A boy named Williams, in a store. Believed that life holds something more.

Then toil and profits out of trade. Vices and pleasures which degrade. And so to serve the spirit's need. He fashioned a courageous creed. Gave boys high aims for which to strive. And thus began the world-wide "Y."

A century ago he stood. Alone, at first, for brotherhood; Saw lad almost in slavery held. To work from dawn to dark compelled. Deprived, debased, ill-clothed, ill-fed.

Upon a path which downward led. And dared to hint that better things God meant for humble folk and kings.

A boy named Williams, asked a friend. An hour or two with him to spend. In searching for a better way. Then was the custom of their day. In time, the circle wider grew. And building, better than they knew.

They dream about the world had flown. The dream they'd fancied theirs alone.

Williams is dead! Today appears The labor of a hundred years. A boy's belief in human souls. A boy's belief that life has goals—Richer and nobler than the mere Pursuit of pleasure, great by year. Has built, though men are born to die.

A world-wide, ever living "Y." (Copyright, 1944, Edgar A. Guest)

No 'Next War' For Germans

An article in the Munich Neueste Nachrichten says that after this war Germany will have no opportunity to bid for military supremacy until she has created sea power capable of combatting that of America and Britain. This is one way of admitting that the Nazi submarine campaign has been a washout. But, more important it reveals that the Germans are already looking forward to the next war.

It is the great task and the high responsibility of the Allies to make it impossible for Germany to wage a "next war." Whether Germany is planning future aggression by means of land, air or sea forces or by a combination of all three should make no difference to the Allies. They must see to it that for decades ahead German industry shall not be turned to the production of guns, planes or ships to further the persisting ambitions of the Prussians and the Junkers.

Oyster plant, or vegetable oyster has a flavor all its own. It is not very heavy in vitamins. It provides about the same amount of nourishment as parsnip does. It is rich in iron.

Salsify makes a nice vegetable for the Victory Garden. It makes for variety. It helps to relieve the monotony of our diet.

It can be served in many different ways. Some people think that it tastes like oysters. Like oysters it contains considerable copper which the body makes use of.

It provides a considerable bulk which helps digestion.

THE DESERTED DEMOCRATS

Consider now the plight of the Jeffersonian Democrat.

In June the Republican Party will hold its national convention and select as its candidate for the presidency a man who had previously been given the approval of the free voters in preferential primaries. So far as the presidency is concerned the convention simply will ratify the choice of the people who comprise the Party.

In July the New Deal Party will hold its national convention and at the point of a gun, nominate for a fourth term the incumbent "or else."

But there will be no convention for the Democrats this summer. For the first time in the history of modern American politics, the party which has controlled the nation's affairs for almost half of its existence will have no candidate for the highest office. It will be neither the majority nor the minority, but the third party.

Confronted with these facts, the Jeffersonian Democrat will be forced to vote for either a Republican or a New Dealer. In so doing, he will not be deserting his party; his party has deserted him. Such a situation is not a happy one for a person to whom Jeffersonian principles were an ideal. The Democratic Party the sole hope of its expression.

It will be cold comfort to him that his vote may well decide the election. If he cannot pick who is (Continued on Page Seven)

What They Say

Languages grow during wars. From the crusades to the first world war, soldiers have brought back strange new words from the lands in which they fought. This war is no exception, and some of the strangest come, oddly enough, from another English-speaking country.

Listen to this from Australia, part of a conversation in a forthcoming movie: "It's a bit of shivoo you want, just waitz your matilda along the billabong. The sweetmeats is practically grown on coolibahs."

In plain English this means, "If you'll wait along the quay, you'll find pretty girls practically growing on trees." Oh well, the Australians would probably have some trouble interpreting five talk.

According to reports from Europe Spain is no longer going to get its aspirin supply from Germany. Perhaps Hitler needs all of it himself.

First World War American Commander Sees Invasion As Start Of Thorough Victory

By JOSEPH A. BORS (U.S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, June 6—(INS)—General John J. Pershing, who led the United States Army to victory over Germany in the first World War, today highlighted Washington reaction to the second World War invasion of Europe by declaring "we will win through to victory."

As news of the cross-channel invasion was flashed throughout the nation's capital, the War Department issued a statement by Pershing predicting Allied victory over Germany in the second World War. Pershing asserted the Allies would "bring freedom to peoples who have been enslaved."

Retires At Early Hour

President Roosevelt presumably heard the news in his White House bedroom. He retired early after broadcasting a radio address in which he rejoiced over the liberation of Rome and asserted the Allied armies now have "one up and two to go" in capturing enemy capitals.

The overwhelming sentiment in official circles, however, was expressed by General Pershing, who wrote out his statement from his present quarters in Walter Reed hospital. He said:

"Today, the sons of American soldiers of 1917-18 are engaged in a like war of liberation. It is their task to bring freedom to peoples who have been enslaved. I have every confidence that they, together with their gallant brothers in arms, will win through to victory."

Allied Landing Brings Memories Of World War I

Many New Castle Men Landed At Le Havre And Cherbourg In World War One

Landing of the Allied forces in France this morning brought back fond memories to many New Castle men who served in the A.E.F. in World War One, as it was in the same area that the initial landings were made today, that they first put foot on French soil, either at Cherbourg or Le Havre.

Troops which landed at Le Havre usually went to England first, and after a few days spent in an English rest camp to get rid of the effects of the voyage across, went across the channel from Southampton to Le Havre at night. The trip was made under cover of darkness, and the arrival was usually just at dawn the next morning. Many who did not get sick on the trip across the Atlantic, did on the short trip across the channel.

Then the men marched up a long winding road, always uphill to the top of the bluff overlooking the city of Le Havre, where they spent another night in a British rest camp. It took all morning to make the hike, part of the toughening up process for what was to come later. The men slept in tents shaped like an Indian tepee, either head or feet to the center pole, and it made no difference which way one slept, someone was always kicking you in the face, one veteran recalled today.

After remaining overnight at Le Havre, the men marched down over a short hill, only a few hundred yards it seemed, to the railroad tracks below, where they boarded a train of box cars, the familiar "40 hommes et 8 chevaux," from whence they went on to their destination, usually a training area, somewhere else in France.

Those who landed at Cherbourg as a rule did not see England, but landed directly at that point, which is on a long peninsula jutting out into the North sea.

At its maximum size, the average sun spot is about as large as the earth.

Huge Preparation Made For Attack

Latest Weapons Of Every Type Put In Use For Invasion Of Europe

By THOMAS C. WATSON

SUPREME ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE HEADQUARTERS IN ENGLAND, June 6.—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower began his tremendous task of landing Allied armies on the northern coast of France this morning.

Thus begins one of the most stupendous operations ever conceived by military minds in the whole history of warfare.

Everything possible was done to ensure success of the parachute landings which touched off the long-awaited invasion hardly more than 24 hours after the liberation of Rome.

With Gen. Sir Bernard Law Montgomery of Africa fame in command of the combined sea and air assault forces which led the attack, highly skilled seamanship together with months of practice certainly minimized the risks involved to the lives of the attackers.

Latest Weapons Used

Enemy air attack was envisaged by provision of many of the latest weapons of both long and short range to offset hostile action.

It was known that strong enemy forces of destroyers, submarines and E-boats were concentrated in tactical positions off the coast and their raids will have to be thwarted to prevent dislocation of carefully laid plans.

Nazi submarines were expected to join in the battle from bases as far away as the Bay of Biscay and their neutralization has been left to the skilled and courageous efforts of the Royal Air Force coastal command.

At the time of writing this dispatch at supreme headquarters, guns of Allied naval forces are operating in a stunning long-range bombing of Germany's defensive positions along the whole French coastline.

The bulk of naval forces were provided by the American and British navies, with the overall proportion, including craft, about three British to two American. All other Allied nations, however, have provided a significant naval quota.

Gen. Montgomery Shows Confidence

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 6.—(INS)—Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, deputy invasion commander in charge of ground troops, today expressed overwhelming conviction the present attack will succeed.

"I personally have absolute and complete confidence in the outcome," he said.

"The party is in first-class shape to win the match. We are a great allied team—a terrific allied team. This is the integration of the British Empire and America going out to battle together. I don't think any other two nations could have done it."

"I don't know when the war is going to end but I don't believe the Germans can go on much longer with this business."

"The German soldier is terribly good but I don't think the German general is as good as he used to be. He has been on the defensive a very long time and I believe it must affect his mentality."

Fill Coal Bin Now ODT Manager Warns

Householders were warned today by District Manager Harry G. Boyd of the Office of Defense Transportation to fill their coal bins during the summer months if they wish to have a supply during the winter months.

Mr. Boyd said that the shortage of motor trucks and drivers available for coal distribution is expected to reach a critical stage by the beginning of the cold season and orders for coal should be placed with dealers now to enable them to make deliveries during the summer.

ODT officials here explained that many trucks engaged in coal delivery are over-aged, or in need of replacement parts or complete rehabilitation. If householders wait until cold weather sets in before obtaining their winter coal supply, they may find it impossible to obtain prompt delivery.

NEWS AND VIEWS AT CAPITAL

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, June 6.—Pennsylvania's 70-member delegation to the Republican national convention will caucus in Chicago June 25 to evaluate the shifting political winds prior to going to the floor for presidential balloting. Although the convention, which opens the next day, appears now to be a cut and dried affair with New York's Gov. Thomas E. Dewey out in front of the pack, rough sailing may be ahead. The 42-year-old chief executive, who captured the public's attention by prosecuting New York gangsters, has a majority of the 519 convention votes needed to nominate but if the pledged delegates cannot pick up support and put him over the top on the second ballot he may fall by the wayside. Dewey has not announced his candidacy but neither has he attempted to restrain friends from boosting his campaign.

DEWEY POPULAR

Dewey's popularity has been accepted by GOP leaders because he has fired the imagination with successful prosecutions but he is not of their choosing. Many politicians were for Dewey only to stop Wendell Willkie in his 1944 campaign and when the Indianan sustained a defeat in Wisconsin they cast hopeful eyes at Gov. John W. Bricker, of Ohio, but Dewey's popularity could not be discounted.

When the nation's chief executives met for their 36th annual conference in Hershey, politicians and every state in the union were present. The Republican who won the approval of the working press was Bricker. The white-haired Ohioan handled himself well in press conferences and was very affable while Dewey played the cat-and-mouse game when interviewed. Bricker, an announced candidate for the presidential nomination, probably would have the support of the Pennsylvania delegation of Gov. Edward Martin believed there was a chance of winning. If Pennsylvania swung to Bricker it would influence smaller states and Dewey's candidacy would be threatened. Some support appeared assured if Bricker was joined by Gov. Earl Warren, of California, as the vice-presidential candidate. One thing appeared certain, according to political observers at the Hershey conference, and that was there will be opposition to Dewey when the convention opens.

WAITS FOR ROOSEVELT

The New Yorker's reluctance to announce his candidacy may be based on his lack of knowledge about President Roosevelt's fourth term plans. If Dewey thinks the president will run again he may not come out in the open prior to the convention. In such event, he faces a draft from his supporters. If nominated and then overturned by the Democratic nominee, Dewey has a firm grasp on the 1948 nomination because party leaders would have to repay him for bearing the standard in defeat. Republican leaders do not discuss President Roosevelt's chances for publication but the Democrats have admitted that if he doesn't seek another term their chances of winning in the November 7 election were very slim.

Governor Martin Calls For State To Offer Prayers

HARRISBURG, June 6.—(INS)—Gov. Edward Martin urged a day of prayer for Pennsylvanians today and suggested church bells be rung at 6 p. m. to herald "this momentous day on which our armed forces have launched their drive for the liberation of the world."

"I urge also that all places of worship be open this day of work and prayer and that the bells be rung at 6 p. m. today summoning the people to assemble at their respective places of worship," the governor said. "Let us all join in prayer, not only today but every day that victory may be granted us soon, to lessen the burden of conflict and tragedy and that peace may come in a brighter world, ruled under God by brotherhood and justice."

Civic Problems Aired At Dinner

Nineteen Communities Represented At GNCA Dinner Conference In Castleton

Sixty men, representing 19 communities in western Pennsylvania, met at dinner in The Castleton hotel Monday night, when a civic organization conference was held. The conference was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Commercial Secretaries association and the State Chamber of Commerce, with the Greater New Castle association as host to the visitors.

Three phases of civic organization work were discussed. "Work for the Chamber of Commerce," "Getting the Work Done," and "The Importance of the Job." Papers were read on each and a forum discussion followed the reading.

Dinner at seven o'clock was served in the Castleton ballroom. At eight o'clock Attorney Marshall G. Matheny, president of the G. N. C. A., welcomed the guests, and Executive Vice President Roger Jewett introduced each guest. Earl D. Bacon, manager of the Organization Service Bureau of the State Chamber of Commerce, presided and spoke briefly before introducing the speakers.

Walter P. Schenck, president of the Pennsylvania Commercial Secretaries association and secretary of the Uniontown Chamber of Commerce, was the first speaker. He discussed "Work for the Chamber of Commerce." In his paper Mr. Schenck stressed the need for post-war planning and the part the Chamber of Commerce or a similar organization could play. He discussed community activities, commercial activities, getting new pay-rolls, the place of the Chamber in protecting merchants and citizenry against "gyp" operations, and co-operation with farmers.

Joseph P. Malik, secretary of the Sharon Chamber of Commerce, discussed "Getting the Work Done." He cautioned against any organization taking on any more projects than it could complete successfully, special problems that will arise, and the division of the activities into four groups: war activities, post-war planning, general community service and state and national affairs.

"Importance of Job"
Donald J. Howard, manager of the public affairs division of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, was the third speaker and discussed "The Importance of the Job." He decried any efforts of government to destroy private initiative and to replace personally accomplished security with governmental guarantees. Summing this idea up, he said: "Either we must provide our own security as individuals, realizing that some of us won't succeed in doing so, or we turn the job over to the government officials and submit to regimentation, classification and loss of liberty at their hands."

Following the papers a forum discussion of over an hour took place in which the points of the speakers were further developed, ideas were exchanged and suggestions for stronger association activities presented.

Present at the dinner-conference were representatives from Allegheny, Beaver Falls, Bessemer, Butler, Ellwood City, Farrell, Greenville, Grove City, Meadville, Mercer, New Wilmington, Rochester, Sharon, Slippery Rock, Vandergrift, Wampum, Zelenkovic and New Castle.

THE PARENT PROBLEM

babies, bring them up to be careful of property and respectful of the rights of others. Once a large group of these "good" parents win such a reputation, many less privileged parents will imitate them and the problem of "no children allowed" will gradually diminish. Young parents agreeing with me might gain some help from my bulletin, "How to Teach Tot Meaning of No," to be had for a stamp self-addressed envelope sent to me at 235 East 45th street, New York City.

No matter how well little children are trained they will soil some wall paper. In this event, and where more damage is done, the wise parent will volunteer to pay the landlord. Just to abuse the landlord gets us nowhere but to harm the children morally. After all, the main problem is not what happens to the landlord's property but to the moral character of the child. Property can easily be repaired or replaced.

Aerial Offensive At Greatest Peak

Huge Formations Of Planes Cross Channel As Land Invasion Begins

LONDON, June 6.—(INS)—The Allied cross-channel aerial offensive attained its greatest intensity today coincident with the invasion of Northern France.

Residents of London were awakened in the very early morning by huge formations of Allied bombers and fighters dropping overhead toward the coast and France.

Watchers on the Dover coast described the air fleets as the "greatest yet" to go out.

The dawn formations swept out from their British bases after a night in which the German radio told of "several nuisance raiders" appearing over northwestern reaches of the Reich.

These night-flying aircraft operated in the wake of an estimated 3,500 Allied planes which dropped approximately 3,000 tons of high explosives upon Nazi anti-invasion installations in northern France.

Heaviest assaults were unleashed against the mystery installations in the Calais-Boulogne areas. Huge four-engine bombers and Liberator bombers raked that much-maligned sector with huge loads of high explosives and incendiary bombs.

THE WORLD AND THE MUD PUDDLES

to run third he can, at least, say who shall be first. And there seems little doubt from the polls, as of the present, that this is what will happen. The Republican upsurge is continuing, but it has not yet reached the stage where the Party can be too confident of victory. Perhaps that is a good thing, for overconfidence has lost many an election. As it looks now, the G. O. P. will have to obtain the votes of the new third party if it is to win. The same thing, of course, applies to the New Deal Party.

In two regards, the Republicans already have made a strong bid for this vote. They have championed state rights, thus breaching one of the stone walls that separated them for so many years from the Democrats. But the New Deal abandoned that principle, in favor of centralized federal power, thus again leaving high and dry those who believe in the philosophy of Jefferson. The Republicans also have fought hard to put an end to the dictatorship and bureaucracy that are so un-Jeffersonian.

Many bridges are to be crossed between now and November 7. New issues may crop up out of the clear. But, whatever they may be, there is no hope for either the Republican or the New Deal Party to win the election without the help of the third party, the party of Jefferson, the abandoned Democrats.

Spring Reunion Opens Tomorrow

Largest Class In Past Fifteen Years Is Anticipated For Consistory Reunion

EVENT WILL BE STREAMLINED ONE

Everything is in readiness for the opening of the annual spring reunion of the Valley of New Castle Consistory, A.A.S.R., which will get under way with the registration of candidates on Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Commander-in-Chief Howard Geary announced today. The largest class in 15 years is anticipated, Mr. Geary stated, over 300 being expected to receive their degrees in Scottish Rite Masonry.

As has been the case since the war imposed restrictions on such gatherings, the reunion will be a streamlined affair, the sessions being confined to meetings in the afternoon and evening.

The convocation will conclude Friday afternoon when the 32nd degree will be conferred on the class, to be followed by the customary dinner party, for which 1,400 reservations are expected. A program of entertainment consisting of a talking picture and dancing will wind up the reunion. Many who will be unable to attend the dinner are expected present for the entertainment.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

Wallace as president is as appalling to these as it is appealing to the others. The interesting thing about these widely divergent groups is that, poignantly as they feel for and against Mr. Wallace, whether he is named again or not will not affect the Roosevelt vote in November. One side regards Mr. Wallace as a great political asset, the other insists that he will be a heavy liability to the ticket. Neither is right. Certainly, all the left wingers and the CIO leaders most earnestly for Mr. Wallace are also for Mr. Roosevelt. They will be keenly disappointed if Mr. Wallace is dropped, but no one thinks they, then, will turn around and vote for Governor Dewey. That would be ridiculous.

ON THE other hand, the opposition to Mr. Wallace comes from Southern Democratic politicians and the anti-New Deal Democrats and Republicans. Much as the latter dislike Mr. Roosevelt, they would far rather have him president than Mr. Wallace. But no one thinks that if Mr. Roosevelt ditched his vice-president, these anti-New Deal Democrats and Republicans will vote for him. They will just be glad they haven't got the Wallace threat to face, but this would diminish their desire to get rid of Mr. Roosevelt, no matter to whom the second place goes. As for the Southern politicians, who are violently protesting the Wallace renomination, nearly everybody agrees they will vote the Democratic ticket regardless of who is on it.

THUS, it seems clear that Mr. Roosevelt will neither lose nor gain votes through Mr. Wallace. Whether he is on or off is not going to alter the total sufficiently in any state to affect the result. Under these circumstances, and conceding that Mr. Wallace's fate is in the president's hands, the best judgment is that Mr. Wallace will be renominated. The strongest reason for believing this is that the Wallace advocates are Mr. Roosevelt's friends, while his opponents are mostly anti-Roosevelt and will continue anti-Roosevelt regardless of what he does. In brief, there is no political advantage to be gained for the president in dropping Mr. Wallace. That being so, it would be an unnecessary and stupid piece of cruelty to a perfectly loyal friend.

SHORT JURY SESSION

Following the precedent of the last five or six grand juries, the June grand jury made short work of the bills of indictment presented. Eleven cases were presented all of them being found true bills. Of the eleven cases presented one was to prevent the case being invalidated due to the statute of limitations. Three of the cases are against two men and if the entire list is tried there will be but eight cases.

North Carolinians did not vote in the first presidential election, since it had not at that time (1788) ratified the Federal Constitution.

Briton Who Fled Nazis Gives Talk

Gives Dramatic Recital Of Escape From Nazi Prison Camp Two Years Ago

New Castle Rotary club members heard an interesting speaker at their noon luncheon meeting Monday when they were addressed by Leslie Ditchfield, chief engineer's writer, with the British Merchant Marine who was taken a prisoner by the Nazis when they occupied Paris, and who later escaped and fled France through the assistance of the French underground.

In addition, the club dedicated an honor roll to their members in service, which includes the following: Elmer W. Reiber, Samuel W. Perry, Jr., Blair D. Alversen, Richard E. Rentsz, Sidney L. Lockley, Thomas W. Solomon and David McBride.

Mr. Ditchfield is the guest of his fiancée, Miss Elizabeth Lewis of Waldorf street, whom he met in Swansea, Wales, where the two attended college together.

At the outbreak of the war he was in France studying the French language preparatory to going to North Africa, as a missionary. When the Nazis overran the country, he tried to escape to England, but was taken prisoner and after two months of confinement in a prison in Paris was transferred to a Nazi prison camp.

When he learned that he was due to remain there until the end of the war after a year and a half of confinement, Mr. Ditchfield and two companions, French-Canadians, decided to try to escape, which they did under the very noses of their Nazi guards, on February 12, 1942. They had to cut their way through two barbed wire fences, and scale two difficult walls, but finally got free.

Through the French underground, Ditchfield was furnished with false birth certificates and identification papers and finally made his way to Gibraltar and thence to England. He exhibited the papers which aided him in eluding the Germans.

State Will Protect Pymatuning's Ducks

SHARON, June 6.—Ducks walking on the backs of fish to get food thrown by sightseers is a sight which the Pennsylvania department of forests and waters is going to protect from now on.

From now on, hucksters are going to be permitted to sell stale bread to visitors to the dam, and parking ground for 300 automobiles will be available near the Linesville-Espsyville spillway.

Residents have been protesting the regulations which prohibited cars from stopping on the spillway, and the new Pymatuning Improvement Association has been agitating for action from the state. The group decided that a sight which was worth being in the news reels is also worth having facilities for visitors.

Relief Record Now At New Low

County Assistance Board Relief Demands Drop Steadily For Three Years

Cases dependent on public assistance in Lawrence county are now fewer than they have ever been since the Board of Assistance was established, according to John B. Binton, head of the Board.

The case load right now is 1.9 per cent of the population of the county, a record which is even lower than the low state record of 2.2.

War-time vacancies and summer opportunities are both reasons for the decrease, Mr. Binton said.

Old age assistance cases are about 65 per cent of the case load right now. General assistance has dropped away down, making up only about 10 per cent of the total case load.

The decline in the number of persons, which has been gradually going on since 1941, has resulted in the cutting down of the staff of the Board of Assistance.

The situation is good for the community as a whole, for business as well as for individuals, Mr. Binton commented.

In a single air action in North Africa, Army Air Forces pilots fired 25,000 rounds of 50-caliber ammunition without a single malfunctioning attributable either to the Army Ordnance gun or the Army Ordnance ammunition.

Letters Come From Sgt. Paul Johnson

Bessemer Man Waist Gunner On Bomber When It Goes Down In Adriatic; Crew Saved

Letters have been received here from Sgt. Paul R. Johnson, serving in Europe as waist gunner on a bomber, whose father, George Johnson, of Bessemer, was recently advised by the war department that his son had suffered injuries on a mission over the continent.

Five letters received Monday morning in Bessemer from Sgt. Johnson will tell the story of a narrow escape by the crew of his bomber. Out on a mission, the bomber crashed in the Adriatic sea and sank in 80 seconds. All of the crew stayed afloat in the water for an hour and a half until sighted and picked up by a British ship.

Sgt. Johnson, at the time of writing, had already returned to duty, after spending two weeks following the crash in a rest camp on the Isle of Capri with four officers and the engineer of his plane.

Senate Votes To Delay Trial Of Short And Kimmel

Senate Votes To Extend Court Martial Until June 7, 1945, For Pearl Harbor Chiefs

By RAYMOND WILCOVE
(U.S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The Senate voted Monday to extend for one year until June 7, 1945, the statute of limitations permitting the court martial of Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, commanders at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941.

Before the vote was taken, Sen. Bennett C. Clark (D) Co. charged that Admiral Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Short were not being brought to trial "because some higher-ups in the government are afraid of what they would say."

"I think there's been a disgraceful procedure so far," Clark asserted. He announced his opposition to further extension of the statute.

Admiral Kimmel and General Short have not been brought to trial apparently because some higher-ups in the government are afraid of what they would say," he charged.

"We all know," he added, "that if we extend this statute for another year, these men will never be brought to trial or, if they are, important witnesses will not be available and they might just as well have not been brought to trial."

"Somebody ought to be court-martialed while the evidence is still fresh. I think it amounts to an attempt to hush up the whole episode."

BRIEF NEWS OVER STATE

HERSHEY—"Women could probably avert war if they played a bigger role in politics," declared Mrs. Sam Jones, wife of the former governor of Louisiana, at the 36th annual governor's conference at Hershey. "Women can size up characters better than men," she explained.

PITTSBURGH.—The influx of women into industry was believed responsible for a notable decrease in feminine delinquents in Allegheny county. "They are working as machinists and riveters, inspectors and shipping clerks," stated Lawrence P. Keenan, superintendent of the Allegheny county workhouse. "They have money and are staying off the streets."

OLYPHANT.—A 54-cent overcharge on a pair of stockings cost Harry Wildes, an Olyphant merchant, more than $50 under an OPA ruling. Mrs. Rita Laika, of Olyphant, who paid $1.69 for hose with a $1.15 ceiling, filed the suit.

WILKES-BARRE.—Mayor Con McCole, of Wilkes-Barre, recently tried to enlist some domestic help while addressing 450 women members of the Wyoming Valley Retreat Guild. When all offers proved fruitless, he finally said:

"O. K., then. That's the kind of members you have—not a woman in the house who wants to work."

Jap Submarine Here On June 8

You'll be getting another chance to see the captured suicide submarine, "secret weapon" of the Japanese, which is on tour to raise funds for Bundles for America, the organization which provides aid for the armed forces.

The sub will be on exhibition at the Public Square on June 8.

Would License News Commentators

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(INS)—Sen. Ed. Johnson (D) Colo., on Monday introduced an amendment to the communications act which would require the licensing of radio news commentators and their compliance with a Federal "code of ethics."

Under terms of the amendment, the Federal Communications Commission would be authorized to revoke licenses for non-compliance with the proposed code.

Provisions of the code are: 1. News shall be presented with fairness and accuracy.

2. No commentator shall make any false, slanderous, libelous, or derogatory statement concerning any person.

3. News commentaries and analysis shall be presented in compliance with all provisions of the communications act of 1934.

The measure would also require radio stations to identify all sponsors of commercial programs at the time of the broadcast.

Belgian Refugee Now Boy Scout

PITTSBURGH, June 6.—(INS)—A 15-year-old Belgian refugee, who used to be a Boy Scout in Liege before the Nazis took him and his parents to a concentration camp in France, is trying to forget that he doesn't know whether his mother and father are living or not.

Sam Chimin, whom the Red Cross brought to the United States about two years ago, stood before a camp fire around which 326 other scouts of the Twin Rivers district of Allegheny county gathered and in fluent English told his new friends of two years' internment.

"We slept on a few pieces of straw in broken-down barracks," he said. "They fed us turnips for two months. Then they fed us cabbage for two months. Turnips and cabbage, turnips and cabbage."

"Finally the Red Cross started to distribute powdered milk. That helped some. The Germans didn't treat us well."

Sorry, No Guarantee With Fishing Class

MINNEAPOLIS, June 5.—Yes, there is really a class in fishing. Of course, the professor, Samuel Eddy, doesn't guarantee to teach anyone how to catch fish, but he does "drop a few pointers in class."

The course, held at the University of Minnesota, is very popular with professional men of the Twin Cities, especially since it is a night class. The zoology professor who teaches it, conducts along slightly unorthodox methods.

"It is," said Eddy, "the only class in which fishermen can expound their pet theories. There are usually some hot arguments about the best hook, line and sinker, but so far there have been no open fights."

OCD NOTES

Meeting caller for the city OCD Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. is open to any person who wants to assist with a canvass for registration of persons in the military service.

This task has been given to the OCD, but provisions have been made by the State OCD to use any person responsible who will help. If anyone is interested they should attend the meeting in the City building.

They will have one job to do, and that will be to get the names and addresses of persons in the service. Ballots will be taken care of by the other authorities.

All those thousands of stirrup pumps produced shortly after this country's entry into the war—which were to be used to put out blazes it was feared might be started by enemy bombing raids—may become useful after all.

The federal department of agriculture has suggested that they can be converted into garden sprayers to "quench" insect pests.

It said the pumps are being turned over to commercial companies by the Reconstruction Finance Corp. for sale at prices approximately their original cost to the government.

Garden Notes

If your victory garden got a late start, then the late cabbages should be included in the plantings. Seeds can be planted in an unused part of the garden to grow plants which can be reset about the middle of July. All Seasons, Late Flat Dutch and Ballhead are suitable varieties for late plantings.

If you prefer a dry-fleshed sweet potato then obtain plants of Jersey and Triumph varieties. If you prefer the moist-fleshed type, usually called yams, grow Nancy Hall, Pearson or Porto Rico.

The war on insect pests in the victory garden is a big job at this time of the year. Persistence in your campaign against plant pests will pay, however, in better plants and better harvests.

After the potato plants come up do not work the soil any more than necessary to control weeds. Make preparations to dust or spray as soon as the plants are three or four inches high.

Winter radishes, which grow to enormous size require cool weather at the finish of their growing season. Sow seed in early summer for fall radish crops and in mid-summer for late fall and winter crops.

If your tomato plants are not going to be staked, then mulch under the plants for clean fruit as well as more vigorous growth.

Mexico To Get New Diesel Plant

MEXICO CITY, June 5.—An addition to Mexico's industry will be a large Diesel motor factory, capitalized at 10,000,000 pesos, or about $2,000,000 which is to be established here this year.

Although its capital will be subscribed in Mexico, North American businessmen are handling patent arrangements and are furnishing the technical directors for the plant.

BAGGAGE METHOD TO SAVE LUGGING

CHICAGO.—(INS)—Less stretch and strain in storing luggage is in prospect for postwar train travelers, according to a survey made by the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Co., which found that 37 major railroads are in favor of putting bags under seats or in a compartment at the end of the car.

Sgt. Hasson Is Back Home Again

Local Man Shot Down By Nazis, Home After Thrilling Trek Across Europe

TOOK NINE MONTHS TO REACH ENGLAND

Technical Sgt. Halleck Hasson, son of Frank Hasson of 818 Carson street, is back home after one of the war's most thrilling adventures, but the world will have to wait for his story until after the war is over, as Army Intelligence will not permit him to tell it because three of his buddies are still trying to escape the same way he did.

By now, they are probably either safe or prisoners of the Nazis. Four others of his crew were taken prisoner and three got back safely to England. The other two arrived there in March. Hasson made it on May 9. He got back to his home here last night.

Sergeant Hasson's Fortress was shot down by Nazi fighters on September 6, 1943, when the pre-invasion blitz against German installations was just beginning to take on colossal proportions, and the Nazi fighters were incensed and attacked with fury and utter disregard for the consequences.

Then began the start of the nine-months long hike, first through enemy territory and finally through a neutral land, then into occupied France. Traveling was done by night, and during the day he hid, sometimes helped by the underground, sometimes on his own. Strange as it may seem, he actually gained eight pounds. During this time, he saw lots of country he had only read about in his school geography before, and never expected to see.

Prior to being shot down, he took part in the famous shuttle raid over Regensburg on August 17, 1943, which ended in North Africa. That was a tough assignment, as Sergeant Hasson recalls it. The Germans were after them all the way, and it was the first time that he had any experience with the new rocket weapon the Nazis had brought out.

On the way back to England, his formation bombed Bordeaux. Eleven planes were lost by his squadron on that occasion, which was the biggest loss they had sustained in any one day. His squadron received a special citation from the President for this exploit.

Sergeant Hasson will report to the Atlantic City air redistribution center for further duty on June 25, and will probably serve some time as an instructor at an air field in this country.

In the meantime, he expects to take a well deserved vacation. Sergeant Hasson arrived in the United States last week, and reported to the Army Intelligence Office in Washington, where he received his orders on what he would be permitted to say about his adventures, which in this case, was "absolutely nothing," and he is keeping his word. He's got a lot on his chest he would like to get off, however, and some day will.

Warns Invaders Tough Task Ahead

By JOHN W. JARRELL
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

ABOARD A SEALED U. S. WARSHIP IN A BRITISH PORT, June 6.—The Rear Admiral Commanding U. S. Naval forces in the invasion today of Hitler Europe, in a message to the American, British and French personnel of his command made no bones of the fact that they had the toughest kind of job before them.

However, he expressed complete confidence of the success of the operation.

The coming battle, he said before the armada sailed, demands more seamanship and more fighting than any we have undertaken.

"We must destroy an enemy defense system which has been four years in the making and our mission is one against which the enemy will throw his entire remaining strength," he declared.

"These are not beaches defended by an apathetic enemy or defended by hasty fortifications. They are prepared positions, held by Germans who have learned by past failures.

"They have coastal batteries and minefields; they have bombers, E-boats and submarines, and they will try to use them all."

Then, exuding confidence, the Admiral added:

"To this battle, (though), we bring our tested methods."

Avery Accuses Administration Of Unfair Assistance

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(INS)—Sewell Avery, board chairman of Montgomery-Ward, accused the administration today of giving "unfair and illegal assistance to labor unions" to force surrender of employers' liberties, destroying collective bargaining and encouraging labor strife.

Termin President Roosevelt's recent seizure of Ward's Chicago establishment "a usurpation of a power not granted by congress or the constitution. Avery charged before a special house investigating committee that federal bureaus "have formed a machine for purchasing political support from labor organizations."

"The seizure of Ward's plant developed a spontaneous and continuing public indignation which resulted in this investigation," Avery declared. "This indignation is easily interpreted. A free American people will not accept dictatorship."

Soviet Ambassador Expresses Views On Second Front

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(INS)—Soviet Ambassador Andrei A. Gromyko today hailed the opening of the "second front" which Russia has so long demanded and predicted "a speedy and complete victory."

By the first official Soviet reaction to the invasion news, the ambassador declared that he was confident that "the combined blows of the powerful Allied coalition will insure a speedy and complete victory over the enemy."

The news of the invasion, he said, was "good and encouraging."

Gromyko conveyed the wishes of the Soviet people for "all success to our allies in this most important military undertaking, which is speeding up our common victory over the mortal enemy of mankind—Hitlerite Germany."

"The catastrophe of Fascist Germany is growing near. What Hitler and his criminal clique have dreamed most has happened. Germany is forced to carry on the war on two fronts," he declared.

OVERCAST SKY HAMPERS FLIERS AIDING INVASION

nel I saw one hell of a lot of boats. It looked like you could walk across."

"I couldn't see the target," said Second Lieut. George Soniak, bombardier of Chicago, "but fighter-bombers below the clouds sure were giving them hell."

Lieut. Col. Gibson E. Cisco, of Fort Wayne, Ind., said:

"I saw the flashes of naval guns from battleships and cruisers shelling the coast and the smaller answering bursts of coast guns."

Three missions in all were scheduled for bombers at the station.

D-Day At Station

"D-Day" began at this station Monday when leading pilots and bombardiers were briefed for their historic invasion mission.

The airmen squatted on the floor of their map-lined war room and listened in tense silence to the dramatic announcement naming their target, a small town on the Normandy coast of France. Their task they were told, was to destroy coast batteries and machine-gun emplacements.

Big Gen. Walter R. Peck, of Lima, Ohio, commander of the combat wing, told his men:

"The world's biggest invasion fleet will be only 400 yards off shore when you are over the target. So for pete's sake smack the target."

"You are the spearhead upon thousands depend on you."

His words were greeted by gasps and whistles.

The crew members were told that they were part of a vast armada in which the Liberators were to take off and leave the English coast, reach the target and bomb it, and return to base about 8:30 a. m.

The second mission was due to pinpoint more targets in the same general area. Other targets included vital lines of communication inland.

"D-Day" arrived solemnly. For one thing, Col. Pierce banned whiskey at the club bar and cancelled leaves Monday. Both actions aroused suspicion.

Bad weather dogged the heaviest of the base on the second "D-Day" mission. Twelve Liberators returning at noon from the Normandy invasion coast reported they were unable to drop their bombs because heavy clouds hid the target.

Boats were lined up all the way to the invasion coast, said Second Lieut. James I. Berlinger, of the Bronx, N. Y.

"They looked like a string of pearls."

None of the airmen saw any Nazi fighter planes. There was no anti-aircraft fire.

Spectacles have been in use by men since 1300.

U. S. Forces Are Confident On Invasion Day

Hear Final Word From Commanders As They Embark For Invasion

By CLARK LEE
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

WITH U. S. INVASION FORCES AT THE ENGLISH CHANNEL, June 6.—Allied troops boarded invasion boats for the smash into Hitler Europe early today filled with confidence and eager to get on with the job ahead.

There was no bravado, no noticeable tension and no visible elation. These were just a bunch of American youngsters who wanted to get their job over with as quickly as possible.

Knew Destination

They knew where they were going and why. After months of rigorous training they felt as ready as they would ever be for what they knew would be a dangerous and bloody task from which many would not return and from which others would come back blind, limbed and shocked.

But for most of them, this was their first battle and such thoughts were far back in their minds.

As one shavetail told me: "I feel the first step on the beach will be my first step home."

"For three years each step I have taken has been away from home. Now is the time to get started back."

Goes With Troops

I am accompanying the American assault force which was chosen for the all-important task of making the first breach in one sector of the steel and concrete explosive wall that Hitler has thrown around his enslaved countries.

Their job is to die on the beaches or in charging the wall if necessary, but at all costs to blast holes through which following forces can pour for eventual destruction of Germany and liberation of Europe.

Men standing on the decks of our LCT (landing craft, tanks) listened crowded together in close attention as their commanding officer read a letter from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower telling them that the hopes and prayers of liberty-loving people everywhere are marching with them to victory.

Leaning against jeeps and other vehicles they appeared absorbed as they heard other messages from Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery and Omar Nelson Bradley. All three promised victory "with God's help."

Last Instructions

The commanding officer of headquarters company troops of the LSI read the messages rapidly but expressed no emotion.

"There's not much need for me to say anything. In the event of air attacks, the only thing will be done by the navy and our 80-calibers. It's unlikely the big bombers will go after us because we're a small target."

"We may get strafed. If so, get under your vehicles as quick as you can. Lie there and pray to God."

"There's no need to say anything more. This is the McCoy. Every one of you have proved himself one hundred times over. We count on you to do your stuff."

The men smiled and clapped briefly, a little self-consciously, then turned away. A few minutes later they scattered into small groups in the narrow passages between vehicles and some fell asleep atop the jeeps. Some listened to American jazz from a radio car.

Gen. Eisenhower Presses Button To Start Invasion

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(INS)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower pressed the button for allied invasion of Europe early today from this tented camp in the depth of the sleeping English countryside.

Here in a motor trailer he is directing the first phase of history's most gigantic amphibious operation far from his great base headquarters and surrounded by only a nucleus unit of his field commanders and his ace staff officers.

It was at night that the supreme commander, pink, serene and confident made his great decision. Final weather forecasts determined the choice and next morning Eisenhower held another conference to confirm it.

Still the weather was the compelling fickle master of the situation. Reports were favorable and the decision stood again when the vast land, sea and air forces were shaping for the assault the commanders met with General Eisenhower to study the decisive anxious factors of sun, wind and visibility.

Praises Canadians Part In Invasion

OTTAWA, June 6.—(INS)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada declared today that the invasion of western Europe "may be the decisive phase of the war," but warned that the fighting is certain to be costly.

Announcing participation of Canadian troops in the original landings, the prime minister said:

"We have received word that the invasion of Europe has begun and that Canadian troops are accompanying the Allied landing force. Canada will be proud to learn that her troops are being supported by units of the Royal Canadian navy and the Royal Canadian air force."

"This liberation . . . certainly will be costly. We must not expect early results. We should be prepared for local reverses as well as successes. No one can say how long the phase of the war will last, but we have every reason to believe in the ultimate outcome."

Huss Tells Of Naval Bombing Of French Coast

By PIERRE J. HUSS
(U.S. Staff Correspondent)

ABOARD A BRITISH WARSHIP OFF THE FRENCH COAST, June 6.—Six hundred Allied naval guns in rhythmic succession opened fire on the French coast at 5:15 a. m. today.

Two thousand tons of naval shells were laid down along a stretch of the French coast west of Le Havre over a period of 10 minutes.

This ship opened up with the rest, hurling missiles of from four to 16-inch calibre in a terrific 10-minute barrage launched after an unopposed night crossing of the English Channel.

Apparently the Germans were taken by surprise. They are now beginning to reply from under a smoke screen laid down by aircraft to hide us.

It is a tremendous spectacle as the red glare begins to envelop the targets as mine-sweepers clear wide passages for us.

During the night, intermittently, paratroops and airborne forces passed over and opened D-Day in a spectacular manner covered by the omniscient bombardment.

British assault troops successfully stormed ashore at 7:30 a. m. (1:30 a. m. E. W. T.). By 7:45 a. m. they were clearing the beach.

From seven a. m. the most sustained bombardment struck the Germans. It must have stunned them, silencing the majority of their batteries. The Luftwaffe was absent and apparently the Allied air force has complete mastery of the sky.

Now there are low-hanging clouds over the fair sea and the cannonading is thumping this ship on which stands famed Rear Admiral Sir Philip Vian, hero of Narvik and the Altmark prison ship incident.

The landings were effected as destroyers dashingly escorted the forces in to shore. At the moment we are very close off shore ourselves and the whole coast is lined with a smoke pall.

The first stage appears to have achieved complete success.

At eight a. m. the Germans began stiffening their opposition on shore.

Reveal D-Day Offensive Was Postponed Day

Weather Interfered With Plans—Good Progress Is Being Made

CHURCHILL MAKES SECOND STATEMENT

By KINGSBURY SMITH
(U.S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, June 6.—American British and Canadian troops poured into northern France by air and sea in overwhelming strength today and nine hours after the great invasion was announced, supreme headquarters disclosed the operation had disposed of one "initial obstacle" in liberation of Europe.

This gigantic invasion of the continent, carried out with the support of 11,000 planes, more than 4,000 ships and hundreds of massive naval guns, was said by Prime Minister Winston Churchill to have been "successfully effected."

A short while later, the supreme headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's expeditionary force issued its official summary of the first day's operations.

In this widespread attack, a spokesman said, "the first of four or five obstacles have been surmounted."

The invasion, which carried paratroops and glider troops deep inside France and sent vast forces of Allied troops spilling out onto the beaches in what the Germans said was a vast area from Le Havre to Cherbourg, originally was planned for yesterday instead of today, headquarters revealed.

Postponed One Day

Weather conditions forced the 24-hour postponement, the spokesman said.

Simultaneously, Churchill made his second appearance before the House of Commons during the evening and said:

"I can state that this operation is proceeding in a thoroughly satisfactory manner."

"Many dangers and difficulties which this time last night appeared extremely formidable are behind us. The passage of the sea has been made with far less loss than we apprehended."

Supreme headquarters also bore out the prime minister's statement.

Opposition at the beachheads, the spokesman said in "briefing" news and radio correspondents on the course of developments, was less than expected.

The German air force failed to show up "in any strength" and during the day only fifty enemy planes were sighted "at a considerable distance from the scene of operations."

"Coast artillery," he said, "was less effective than anticipated." The invasion was made possible, headquarters continued, only through the excellent work of mine-sweepers. Rough weather marked the start of the undertaking and several landing barges were swamped.

Under Rommel

German forces resisting the Allies are believed to be under command of Nazi field Marshal Erwin Rommel, the spokesman said. He expressed belief the Germans have been tween 1,500 and 2,000 fighter planes available in the west when they want to use them.

Churchill, himself a correspondent of note in the Boer war, made a point of inspecting the situation at first hand and then reporting progress of the operations to the house with great relish.

"I have been to centers where latest information has been received," he said.

"Resistance of enemy batteries has been greatly weakened by the bombing of our air force and superior bombardment by our ships which quickly reduced their power to dimensions which did not affect the problem."

"Landing of troops on a broad front has been effective, our troops have penetrated in some cases several miles inland."

Churchill described landing of air-borne troops as an outstanding feat "on a scale far larger than anything there has been so far in the world."

These landings took place with extremely little loss and great accuracy.

"A very great degree of risk had to be taken with respect to the weather, but Gen. Eisenhower's courage was equal to all the necessary decisions that have to be taken in these extremely difficult and uncontrollable matters."

Disclosing that opposition was less than anticipated and that coastal defenses were weakened into virtual uselessness by air and naval bombardment, Churchill said:

"Our air-borne troops are well established, and our follow-up are all proceeding with very much less loss than we expected."

Fighting is proceeding at various points.

"We have captured various bridges which are of importance and which were not blown up. There even is fighting proceeding in the town of Caen."

"All of this, of course, although very valuable, is a first and vitally essential step but gives no indication whatever of what may be the course of the battle in the next few days or weeks because the enemy will not probably endeavor to concentrate in this area."

"In that event heavy fighting will soon begin and will continue."

"It is therefore a most serious time we are entering upon and we enter upon it with our great Allies in all good heart and all good friendship."

An enormous Allied naval squadron is cruising off Cherbourg, headquarters continued. The sea is reported "very stormy."

At the moment, a spokesman disclosed, there are four distinct centers of fighting in the departments of La Manche (the English Channel) and Calvados, with German resistance stiffening hourly.

President Told Invasion Going Well At Present

(BULLETIN)

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(INS)—President Roosevelt's top military, naval, and air chiefs reported to him today that the massive Allied cross channel assault is going well up to now.

"The invasion is doing all right so far," Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the navy said as he left the White House after an hour and a half conference with the chief executive.

Long Awaited Day Arrives

Climactic Page In World History Is Written By Allies Today

LIBERATION OF EUROPE BEGINS

By J. C. OESTREICHER
(International News Service Foreign Editor)

A new and climactic page in the war-ravaged history of the world was written today when American British and Allied troops stormed into northern France by air and sea and launched the great battle for liberation of Nazi Europe.

Four years from the day the Germans broke the Maginot Line at Sedan, and less than 48 hours after the redemption of Rome, H-hour of D-Day came—the moment so long awaited by the world's democracies and so deeply and realistically feared by the war lords of Germany. As a pure and simple military undertaking the invasion was stupendous in its magnitude. As a controlling factor in the destinies of the world for generations to come it was a stroke that in the future may never find a parallel.

For upon its outcome depends deliverance of the world from Nazi tyranny, and already, only a few hours after the opening gun was fired, there were strong indications of success in the initial phases of the greatest armed operation in the history of the world.

With a prayer for God's support upon his lips and an unshakable conviction of ultimate triumph in his heart, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower gave the signal for attack in the early hours of this morning.

Huge Action Starts

And at his bidding hundreds of thousands of men, 11,000 war planes, thousands of warships and craft of all description and hundreds of belching guns went into action.

By barge, glider and parachute the Allies went into the attack, streaming into French towns and villages over a 100-odd mile stretch between LeHavre and Cherbourg on the northern French coast, while countless thousands baled out behind the German lines to set up air fields and sever enemy communications.

The English Channel skies were black with Allied war craft, heavy and medium bombers, fighters, fighter-bombers, rocket-bombers, tow-planes, gliders, supply and hospital craft and possibly aerial tank carriers.

With the German radio conceding actual establishment of two Allied beachheads and steady reinforcement of troops already landed on the Continent, these facts seemed to stand out as bellwethers of the great offensive.

Salient Facts Seen

1.—The German air force failed to put in anything in the nature of effective opposition and anti-aircraft fire was comparatively light.

2.—Adolf Hitler's "impregnable" fortress Europe appeared to have been taken by surprise to some extent at least, possibly because remote hamlets were chosen for some of the landings along a stretch of coast impossible to defend yard by yard.

3.—German sea fortifications proved far less formidable than had been anticipated.

4.—With the invasion being carried out "in depth" as well as along the shore, there was the hoped-for possibility that German communications would be severed or demoralized, hampering what Allied military leaders clearly expect as the second phase—a Nazi counter-attack in force.

5.—The whole operation in any case found Anglo-American leadership supremely confident. In Washington, Gen. John J. Pershing expressed conviction that "we will win through to victory." Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of all land forces, said he had "absolute and complete confidence in the outcome."

And Gen. Eisenhower, the man with the greatest responsibility and yet the greatest and quietest assurance, said in his final order of the day to his crusaders:

"We will accept nothing less than full victory."

THE giraffe and the turtle tell their own story. . . They help to remind you that electricity, almost alone among household necessities, is still sold at low prices.

You realize how low these prices are when you know that the average American family now gets about twice as much electricity for its money as it did 15 years ago.

If your bill isn't smaller, it is because you have more electric servants and are using more electricity today than you did then.

It's a real achievement to keep electric service cheap in spite of rising costs and taxes — and to keep it plentiful in the face of war's tremendous demands for power.

The credit goes largely to the hard-working men and women of your electric company. Their skill and experience — plus the planning and foresight of sound business management — have made this record possible.

Gen. De Gaulle Sends Message To French People

NEW YORK, June 6.—(INS)—In a broadcast to his homeland, Gen. Charles De Gaulle today called upon French patriots to extend all possible aid to the Allied armies and, above all, to "do everything not to be taken prisoner by the Germans." His talk, heard by CBS, brought home to the French the fact that their forces never before have "had such a glorious opportunity to distinguish themselves."

Fair Or Foul

By LAWTON CARVER
(International News Service Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, June 6.—For the first time since football was brought in out of the cow pastures and put into the great and lavish stadiums the coaches are in open rebellion against the rules committee and determined to make their own rules as they go along. Down through the year there has been some bickering and back-biting from time to time among the official rulers of a game that once was a campus pastime and now is a tremendous sports business, and in some cases a racket. But somehow or other, probably because the money involved engendered an eagerness to avoid lasting friction, they always managed to get together.

This time the coaches are swinging from the heels at the rules committee with an enthusiasm that makes it look quite definitely as though the coaches are going to run the game until such time as the rules committee will stop and ponder for a minute.

Want Revisions

Crux of it all is a demand by the coaches, as recently voiced by their committee chairman, Lou Little of Columbia, for revision of the rules to eliminate aggravating little evils that have crept in during the rules committee's inactivity. The latter has frozen the rules for the duration.

"We can't let the game become stagnant on account of the way," Little said recently. "If we are going to play the game at all we might just as well play it as well as we can."

Bronze And Moose Hot Rivals, Clash

Uni-Refracs Carded To Play West Pittsburg, Alco Opposes I. A. M.

THREE GAMES TO BE PLAYED IN CITY

Having been chastised by West Pittsburg Sunday at Marshall field, the Johnson Bronze hopes to partly atone for the lacing by upsetting the City league leading Loyal Order of Moose on the same ground at 6 o'clock today.

And when the clubs do meet there'll be a twin-battle, one between Messrs. Rodenbaugh of the Bronze and Diffley of the Moose-seasoned vets, and the other will be featured by Beatrice of the Moose and Rainey of the Bronze, ace pitchers.

Two Other Games
The other games will find the International Association of Machinists battling the Alco at Booker T. Washington field and the Uni-Refracs playing West Pittsburg at E. & A. field.

The Machinists strengthened their team just before the deadline for signing players June 1. Whether or not they have been able to mould together a winning team remains a query.

West Pittsburg also strengthened their team and judging from their defeat of the Bronze after giving the Moose a terrific fight in a previous game the Fundoots clan is no push-over.

LOOP MANAGERS ADOPT NEW RULES

Games To End On Sunday At 6 P. M. E. W. T. Managers Decide

Managerial board of the City Baseball league met with M. J. Donovan in the chair at the Y last night and after receiving a decision from the commission that the June 1 Moose-Shenango Pottery game should be replayed adopted several rulings.

A copy of all protests should be filed with the secretary of the league for transmission to the president, loop commission and opposing manager within the time limit prescribed in loop by-laws.

All teams must obtain a home grounds, President M. J. Donovan said he has received complaints of games being shifted without due notice to fans. Almost all teams have a home field.

The managers agreed to play some of their games at Deshon hospital annex following a request delivered personally by Corporal Onizewski, member of the annex physical training staff.

All Sunday games in the league must end at 6 p. m. E. W. T. and all baseball fields must be lined and pitching boxes fixed immediately. Violations after Thursday may result in umpires refusing to start games.

Should managers not agree upon ground rules the umpires will make the ground rules.

HERE AND THERE IN SPORTS LAND

Johnny Ray, manager of Billy Conn, the heavy-weight challenger, has asserted that Conn on a recent trip home told him that he would like to meet Champion Joe Louis in a non-profit match for the entertainment of American fighting men if such a bout could be arranged. Both Conn, a corporal, and Louis, a sergeant, are in the army. Louis is overseas presently, but Conn was represented as being willing to meet the champion anywhere. Ray said that Conn had no intention of putting Louis "on the spot" but felt that the titleholder, too, would welcome an opportunity to meet his No. 1 challenger on such a basis. Conn's manager expressed confidence that Billy would defeat Louis were they to meet again in the ring.

Fifteen letters were given to athletes who made the track and golf teams this spring, at the annual farewell exercises held at Butler high school. Faculty manager William Cross gave the track letters to Jay Farmer, William Jones, James Ward, John Shepley, James Peatty, Michael Hollock, William Perry, Paul Uram, Wallace Zukick and John Lazar. Paul Uram was captain of the track team and John Lazar was manager. Golf letters were awarded to John Uther, captain, Don Zaruck, William Copeland, William Greenough, and James Dillon.

Fred Corcoran, tournament manager of the P. G. A. has given assurance that the scarcity of good golf balls during the war is lifting the level of play for the average linkman. With balls of pre-war vintage now costing $3.30 a dozen, the club-swingers are being mighty careful not to lose them—avoiding waterholes and the rough, sacrificing distance for accuracy. Approximately 1,000,000 persons played on the nation's 5,000 golf courses on Memorial Day, out-drawing both major league baseball and racing.

Seventeen former major and minor league baseball stars now in the army have arrived here and will play in servicemen's league games. It was announced. The group, headed by Joe DiMaggio of the New York Yankees, includes Walt Judnich, St. Louis Browns; Dario Lodigiani, Chicago White Sox; Myron McCormick, Cincinnati Reds; and Gerald Priddy of the Washington Senators.

Golf Clubs Asked For Annex Golfers

Frank Summer Chairman Of Committee To Get Soldier-Patients Golf Clubs

Golf clubs are needed for the men stationed at the Deshon General Hospital annex in Cunningham Park if they are to include golf in their body building schedule of activities. The use of the Sylvan Heights Golf course has been given, free by the mayor and city council, but you can't play golf without clubs.

Hardly a golfer but has one or more clubs for which he has no particular use. These would be handy for the men at the Annex. Frank Summers is the chairman of the committee to gather up old clubs for the Annex men and will accept clubs, balls or tees, whatever can be spared.

Golfers willing to contribute one or more clubs are urged to get in touch with Mr. Summers at Reynolds and Summers, or Samuel Haycock at the Sylvan Heights golf course.

While racing the engine is wasteful, brisk idling is efficient during the warm-up, helping also to keep the battery on charge.

Church Golfers Play Thursday

Play will be resumed on Thursday night at the Castle Hills golf course by the New Castle Church golf league, with four matches being played. The members of the league will tee-off between 5:30 and 6:30 o'clock.

The league started last week and enjoyed fine success on the opening night.

The schedule for Thursday night will be as follows:
First Presbyterians vs First U.P.
Highland U.P. vs First Christians.
First Baptist vs Epworth.
Mahoning Churches vs Harbor U.P.

Solons Order Game To Be Played Again

City Baseball league commission met last night in the Y and ordered the June 1 Moose vs. Shenango Pottery game ended in a tie and should be re-played. The commission's decision was based on the rule-book, according to Secretary Ray Wallace.

The commission acted because of a protest filed by Manager John Sojo of the Shenango Pottery.

First Paratroops Meet Scattered Small Arms Fire

(The following is the first eyewitness story to reach this country from invasion headquarters.)
By WRIGHT BRYANT
Written for the American Press
And Radio
(Distributed for International News Service)

LONDON, June 6.—The first Allied paratroops to land in German-occupied France today met only scattered small arms fire from the fields.

In the opening hour of D-Day, the first spearhead of Allied forces for the liberation of Europe landed by parachute in northern France. In the navigator's dome in the flight deck of a C-47 I rode across the English Channel with the first group of airborne troops.

Just before we left French soil for the return trip to England, I watched from the rear door of our plane, named Snoopy, as 17 American paratroops led by a lieutenant colonel jumped with their arms, ammunition and equipment into German-occupied France.

Scattered Fire
Our group at the head of the leading wing from the U. S. Ninth Air Force troop-carrier command was met with only scattered small-arms fire from the fields, which were dark and quiet as we entered enemy territory. As we headed back towards the English coast, we saw tracers arching through the air behind us and a steady parade of Allied planes moving out over the course we have just navigated to strengthen the ground forces we had left behind.

Prepare To Depart
In the early evening, Major Richardson returned from a conference with Lieutenant Colonel Donaldson of Birmingham, Ala., commanding this lead group. As Major Richardson came within the barbed wire enclosure of his own squadron, he blew a long shrill blast on his whistle. The pilots, co-pilots, navigators and radiomen clustered around him. "Come into the briefing room," he said.

There he stood in front of a large-scale map on which the course was plotted. As quickly as his men were all in the room, Major Richardson said: "Do you know your stuff? There was no word of dissent spoken. Said Major Richardson: 'Get your stuff and report to operations room immediately. I am going down to the colonel to get the weather report. I think this is it. Good luck.'

The crews began to file out of the room but Major Richardson stopped them. "You want to get back, don't you?" he asked.

There was a quick murmur of assent. "Then dammit, get in there and fight," he said. The crews piled in their trucks to go first to the operations office and then to the line where their planes were drawn up and ready to go.

As the first squadron began to take off, the planes rushing in swift succession down the runway, Lieutenant General Lewis H. Brereton, the Ninth Air Force commander, moved up and down the line of planes giving the thumbs up sign to his crews.

Air-Borne Units Strike First Blow

Giant Armada Of Glider-Towing Planes Makes First Invasion

By JOSEPH WILLICOMBE, Jr.
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

A GLIDER TROOP STATION IN ENGLAND, June 6.—Allied air-borne units today struck the first invasion blow against Adolf Hitler's fortress Europe.

Attacking in the early hours of the morning from England, a giant armada of glider-towing planes moved in overwhelming strength toward the continent.

Strings of lights like a gigantic Christmas tree marked passage of the great air fleet strewn over the early summer sky.

Among the gliders were bombers large and small, which laced in and out, going and coming, and leaving in their wake on the soil of enemy Europe huge fires that lit the sky.

Out from a special rendezvous on the harbor-indented coast of England, convoys of landing craft then pushed through the Channel to the softened-up beachhead.

As the air-borne force moved out lights marked the wing-tips of tow planes carrying skilled landing troops in gliders. They returned without the gliders behind them, set down and streaked out again from advanced bases, gliderless but heavy with supplies for the paratroops.

War Bond Rallies Occur On Monday

Meetings Take Place At Standard Steel Springs Plant Morning And Afternoon

Men and women who make the implements of war saw how their work fitted in to the final victory pattern Monday when two bond rallies were held in the recreation building of the Standard Steel Spring company. The first rally was at 10:30 and the second at 3 o'clock, to accommodate all turns.

Motion pictures of the landing on Tarawa and the destruction of the German ball bearing plants at Schweinfurt were shown and the employees got a picture of what their work in the past 18 months has meant. A local touch in the pictures came when the Tarawa picture showed Lt. William Kelley, Castle fighter pilot landed the first Navy plane on the beach at Tarawa.

The rallies were well staged, carried the bond message punch with them and following the rallies bonds were sold to the spring division employees with the usual gratifying results. The employees have set $48,000 as their goal in the fifth war bond campaign.

At the morning rally, Roger Jewett, executive vice president of the Greater New Castle Association and headquarters manager of the bond campaign spoke. Jack Grittle, representing the C. I. O. spoke as did Joseph Booth, a shop steward. T. C. McClain, plant superintendent spoke at the morning rally also.

In the afternoon, Judge W. Walter Braham, county chairman of the bond campaign spoke and Mr. Grittle and Mr. Booth were heard again. R. W. Irwin, executive assistant to Mr. McClain spoke for the company. A feature of the rally was the presence of Lieut. Paris Jones, an army officer of Ben Avon Heights, Pa., who was badly shot up in the Pacific theatre of war. Music for the rallies was provided by the excellent Girls' Chorus of the plant, directed by Vivian Polen. The pictures were shown by Clarence M. England.

Sligo Bank Robbery Nets Bandit $5,000

Lone Bandit Enters Small Mining Town And Robs Bank, Flees In Stolen Car

SLIGO, Pa., June 6.—(INS)—The Sligo National bank was robbed of $5,000 today by a slim, medium-sized bandit in loose-fitting khaki overalls who pushed a gun and a sack at vice president R. A. Cullen and said "Fill it up." The man fled in a stolen car.

W. C. Elliott, cashier of the lone bank in the small Clarion county mining town, had entered the bank while the robbery was in progress but did not notice the bandit until Elliott began to make a telephone call and was abruptly told: "Get that phone up." He did.

Paratroopers And German Forces Battle In France

LONDON, June 6—(INS)—The Nazi-operated Paris radio, quoting "a last-minute flash from the battlefield," said tonight that a vicious battle is raging north of Rouen between powerful Allied paratroop formations and German anti-invasion forces.

STOCK MARKET TRADING STEADY

Stock Market Greet D-Day With Orderly Performance, Some Gains Shown

NEW YORK, June 6—(INS)—The nation's leading securities and commodities markets today greeted D-day with steady and orderly trading.

Prices in most stocks and commodities eased slightly in the first transactions but the recession failed to get far. As a result, before the first hour was past, a steady undertone developed and most initial losses were wiped out, and in many cases, were replaced by plus signs.

Pivotal shares, such as General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Steel and Bethlehem, Anaconda and Kennecott, American Telephone and International Telephone, and the leading rails and rubbers, gave up eight to a half on first sales but were prominent in the recovery.

Chrysler replaced a half-point loss with a gain of the same amount. General Motors rose 1/4; General Electric 1/8; Westinghouse 1/4 and American Telephone an eighth.

The starting role in the before-noon rally was played by International Telephone. It opened unchanged at 14 and then began a steady march to 15 1/4 with blocks running to 1,000 shares crossing the tape 1, T. & T. is a favorite peace stock.

Groupwise, prices were mainly mixed and narrow. The rails were inclined to sag fractionally. Motors were definitely better. Steels were unchanged, communications strong and utilities quiet.

Bond and curb market prices followed about the same trend. Volume in the first hour was high, 343,070 or at about the rate of 1,750,000 shares for the full session.

Pastors of a number of churches will have part in the hour-long service. Rev. Oliver W. Hurst, minister of the host church, will be in charge.

There will also be invasion special service at 8:30 this evening at Tifereth Israel synagogue, 1116 South Mill street. Rabbi Hyman Krash will be in charge.

At Christ Lutheran church, located on East Washington street at Beckford, there will be prayer service this evening at 7:30 conducted by Rev. Walter R. Sommerfield.

Ten Thousand Tons Of Bombs Hit Coast Area

By JOSEPH THOMAS
 (U. S. & Associated Press)

SUPREMACY HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Forces, June 6.—More than 10,000 tons of explosives were shown on invasion coastal targets by an estimated 31,000 airmen in the eight-hour period between midnight yesterday and 8 a. m. today.

Spreading the tremendous aerial armada which by night and day blasted a path for the invading ground forces which by night and day blasted a path for the invading ground forces was a giant formation of "well over" 1,000 RAF Lancaster and Halifax bombers which last night dropped 5,600 or more American tons of bombs on 16 gun batteries, official sources said.

"The resistance of the batteries has been greatly weakened by the bombing of the air force and the superior bombardment of our ships quickly reduced their fire to dimensions which did not effect the problem," headquarters announced in summarizing the operations.

The estimate of 31,000 airmen in action, made by well-informed observers, did not include air-borne troops.

With the coming of daylight, hundreds of other planes took to the air in successive waves until observers estimated that the Luftwaffe—which remained in hiding for most of the time—was outnumbered by at least three to one.

The night attack with its 5,600 tons of bombs was history's greatest and was backed in a few hours by other titanic onslaughts. The night raiders were given no hint that their blows were the start of the offensive.

Throughout the day the sky offensive gained steadily in weight and scope.

Elks Commandos Wind Up Season

Juniors Tendered Picnic At Cascade Park Winding Up Successful Year

As a reward for their splendid work in the war effort, the Elks Junior Commandos were tendered a picnic at Cascade Park Monday by their leader, Col. Katherine Christopher, assisted by her captains, Miss Lois Smith, Mrs. Eleanor Dufford and Miss Nellie Ringer.

The Commandos enjoyed free rides, swimming, and topped off the day's program with a picnic supper.

During the year of 1943-1944, the Commandos sold $92,000 worth of War Savings Stamp Bonds; contributed $100 to the Oak Street school fund for the purchase of a motion picture projector to show educational pictures; gave $75 to the same cause at the Arthur McGill school; and gave the Margaret Henry Home two electric mangles. They also gathered 76,000 pounds of waste paper this year in the salvage effort and gathered and sold 5,500 pounds of waste fat.

Morell To Tell His Story Today To Grand Jury

Mercer Grand Jury Will Hear Evidence Linking Janice Graham To Three Murders

MERCER, Pa., June 6.—(INS)—The commonwealth today summoned William Morell to tell the Mercer county grand jury the story he has twice told in open court—that his former sweetheart, Janice Graham, 20, killed the wife and mother of farmer Everett Wilson and a hired hand on the Wilson farm.

Morell, a 20-year-old orphan, had refused to testify against the blond girl before the March grand jury which had subsequently failed to hand down a true bill for murder in her case.

The murders of Mrs. Helen Wilson, 48, her mother-in-law, Mrs. Katherine Wilson, 78, and the hired man, Robert McKay, 70, occurred October 7 while Wilson was away on a fishing trip.

Morell and the girl, who were both employed on the farm at the time, fled and were captured in Ohio. The boy was charged with the murders but was acquitted of that charge and convicted only of voluntary manslaughter in connection with the death of Wilson's wife.

People Of Nation In Solemn Prayer On Invasion Day

First News Of Invasion Comes When Most Of Nation Is Fast Asleep

(International News Service)

The people of the United States knelt in solemn prayer in thousands of churches in city, town and hamlet today asking divine protection for American and Allied forces smashing at the wall of fortress Europe.

The stirring pronouncement that the Allied expeditionary force had begun the long-awaited invasion was the signal for a mighty march of parishioners to their houses of worship—Protestant, Catholic and Jew.

Both major U. S. networks made immediate plans for covering the invasion on the nation's radio. NBC announced cancellation of all its commercial programs during the day to concentrate on martial airs and invasion news, while CBS said it would curtail commercial shows and break in at any time with invasion broadcasts.

News of the invasion, coming when most of the nation's millions were asleep, spread swiftly, however, and soon after hearing the first cryptic reports on the radio, hundreds of thousands of persons, young and old, flocked to churches where the clergy was ready to lead the faithful in prayer.

D-Day also was the signal to halt baseball games, horse racing and other scheduled sports events.

But this fateful June 6 saw a grimmer expression on the faces of millions of war workers who realized the need to keep the wheels of great industries turning faster to produce more and more arms for the Allied host fighting on the bloody beaches of the French coast.

In sharp contrast to last Saturday when the false invasion report sent a wave of excitement through New York's vast population, the metropolis was quiet today when the real and dramatic announcement came, even though first from the Germans.

Hull Sees Great Allied Victory

HERSHEY, Pa., June 6.—(INS)—Secretary of State Cordell Hull said today that the enemies of freedom were making their last stand and predicted a "great allied victory."

The secretary, enjoying a brief vacation at the palatial Hershey hotel, issued the following statement: "Our brave allied armies today waging the most pivotal battle of all time never more truly represented the cause of liberty and of mankind."

"The forces of savagery desperately endeavoring to destroy the human race are making their last stand. While we fight and pray and while we know that the fight will be hard, we confidently look forward to a great allied victory."

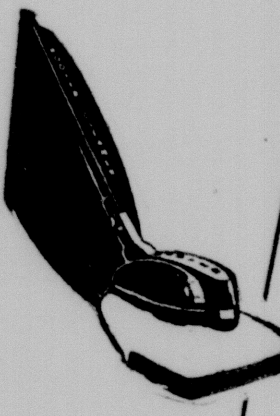

"We must then pledge our all that never again shall the forces of human destruction be let loose upon the world."

Liberty Bell Is Tapped 12 Times

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 6.—(INS)—The Liberty Bell in Independence Hall was tapped 12 times today sending out its hollow tones which once proclaimed freedom for America and now, on D-day, signalled the beginning of the drive for freedom of the world.

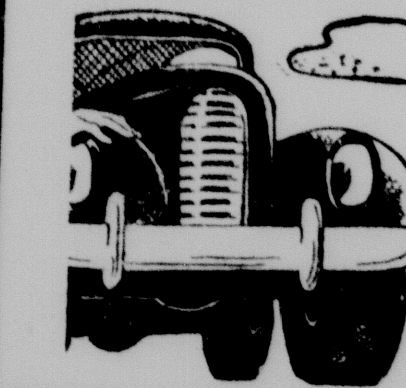

Before sounding the notes, heard over a nation-wide radio hookup, Mayor Bernard Samuel of Philadelphia said solemnly: "Our voices are raised in fervent prayer for the success and welfare of the men engaged in this mission of freedom."

Meanwhile throughout the city news of the invasion spread speedily, and thousands of war workers went to their tasks with added vigor. Churches were thrown open and thousands entered to ask divine help and protection for our fighting men.

Susa's band was heard only once by his mother. It made her so nervous that she never went to hear it again.
